IPI/Skyscraper introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI Skyscraper, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

Fieldcrest Towel Sale

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Remember When...

Groucho Marx, Houdini, Isadora Duncan, Nijinski And President Warren Harding Were In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

People who've lived in the Hamptons for a long time sometimes lament the arrival of all the celebrities and agents and the paparazzi and autograph seekers who seem to have invaded the Hamptons in recent years. With the likes of Kim Basinger and Peter Jennings, Martha Stewart, Jerry Seinfeld, Steven Spielberg and Chevy Chase in the community, they say that the area was so much better in the old days when the only celebrity around was Truman Capote and he pretty much kept to himself off in a wooded part in Sagaponack. Other than that, it was just farmers and fishermen and local people.

The truth is memories are short. If you go back into the archives of Dan's Papers and look through some of the editions published toward the beginning of the century, you see that the Hamptons was as full of excitement and celebrities and millionaires as they are today.

For example, just at random the other day, I took out a back issue of Dan's from August of 1922. All you have to do is glance through the photo pages. There was Bill Tilden the US open tennis champ, here at the Canoe Place Inn photographed with boxing champ Jack Dempsy and New York Yankee home run hitter Babe Ruth who had just hit fifty-nine the preceding year. Swimmer Johnny Weismuller, who would two years later go on to win the 100 meter free style in the Olympic games, then play Tarzan in the movies, was photographed out in Amagansett visiting Buster Keaton and Fatty Arbuckle that year. The three had shares in a house on Atlantic Avenue. Jack Benny lived next door, and that week he was photographed at a benefit for World War I veterans with former President Woodrow Wilson and Mae West who were an item at the time.

There's a photograph of the famous ballet Vaslev Nijinski building himself an oceanfront home in Westhampton Beach...

In Southampton at a music festival headed up by Arturo Tuscanini and Leopold Stokowski, first baseman Roger Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals was photographed with his current flame, Theda Bara. Also photographed were actor Douglas Fairbanks drinking with Booth Tarkington who had just won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction and with Artur Rubinstein, the pianist, who had just played an afternoon piano concerto of Chopin.

Remember

Harry Houdini lived in Southampton that year and there he was, photographed with his good friend Isadora Duncan who earlier in the month set a new speed record for the measured mile, women's division, driving a 1921 Packard at the Bridgehampton Race Circuit.

Groucho Marx was a guest of Tom Mix at the Mix Ranch, the predecessor to today's Deep Hollow ranch, in Montauk that summer. And there's a photograph of President Warren Harding looking very troubled out in Southampton with his press agent, 1922's Miss America, Mary Campbell. The President was here visiting Albert B. Fall, his recently resigned Secretary of Interior who was recovering at his mansion on the ocean after having been forced out of office because of the Teapot Dome scandal. Harding had just returned from Philadelphia where there had been the International Conference on the Limitation of Armaments.

There's a photograph of the famous ballet dancer Vaslav Nijinski, building himself an oceanfront home in Westhampton Beach that year; up on the roof is composer Ira Gershwin.

There are pictures of the benefit chaired by actor Claude Raines for an organization known as Stamp Out Fascism In The Bud (SOFIB). He's photographed with Eugene O'Neill whose Anna Christi has just won the Pulitzer prize for drama and with entertainer Louis Armstrong who is seen holding his freshly polished trumpet. Jack Benny, Will Rogers and Sophie Tucker shared a small house on Main Street in Southampton that year and were photographed along with Rudolph Valentino in the back door garden at the Driver's Seat Café on Jobs Lane. George M. Cohan and Noel Coward are seen in another photograph at the memorial for the late Enrico Caruso, who lived in Water Mill for many years, attended toward the end by his friend Wallace Beery.

Finally there's a photograph of the party held at the home of poet Edward Arlington Robinson's house in Water Mill in honor of Charles Paddock, the American who had won the 100 meter run in the 1920 Olympics in 10.8 seconds. Attending are King Alphonso XIII of Spain and his wife, the English Princess Victoria Eugenia of Battensberry along with her house guest Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov, the man they call Lenin who recently overthrew the Czar of Russia. Ulyanov is looking very ill in the photograph.

As you can see, the number of celebrities in the Hamptons waxes and wanes. There are periods when there's almost nobody here and then periods when the place is filled with the glitterati and super stars of their respective eras.

Stop up and go through the archives of Dan's Papers anytime. Come see the photos of the big party held by New York City's Boss Tweed in 1873 in Amagansett or the BBQ on the beach in Montauk in 1689 given by Captain William Kidd, the privateer who turned pirate. Among those attending were Voltaire and Spinoza. They shared a house in Hither Hills that year. •

Prom Night

Actual, True Story Of Some East Hampton Parents Who Threw A Post Prom Party

By Dan Rattiner

Last Saturday night was Junior Prom Night in many of our local towns. It was like Christmas and New Year's all rolled into one for all the limousine services. Renting a limo could run upward of $800 or $900 for the evening. It was supply and demand. The young women wore ball gowns and corsages, the young men tuxedos. It can be a wonderful evening for these kids, something for everyone, something they will never forget.

In recent years, though, it hasn't been so wonderful. There have been problems with drinking and drugs. For a couple of schools, prom night has even been cancelled. Nevertheless, there are optimists among us and what follows is a true story of the post-prom party that Cathie and I gave last Saturday night in East Hampton for these kids. Make of it what you will.

It was Cathie's idea. She came to me two weeks before prom night and said that when the prom would end around 11:30 – it was being held at the high school – there was no place for the kids to go until a breakfast out in Montauk at 2 a.m. There were also a lot of kids not going to the prom at all.

"Let's have a party at our house for them." She said. "Somebody has to step forward. My parents had the prom party for me when I was growing up in Aquebogue."

"That was a long time ago." I said. "Gunpowder hadn't been invented."

"Twenty-five years from now what will they remember?" she said. "They'll remember we did this for them."

We have three male teenagers, one a sophomore, one a junior and one a senior who is dating a junior and going to the prom with her. Cathie was right.

"How many do you think we should plan for?" I asked.

"Two hundred," she said. "Leave it to me."

The next day I read in the paper that Sean Puffy Combs, the rock star who has a house in East Hampton had been fined $2,000 by a local judge for failing to get a permit to hold a party at his house. He was humiliated by the fine, the media said, and he was pulling up stakes and reportedly moving to a large estate near Westhampton.

I seemed to recall that if you have a private party of fifty or more you had to get a permit for it, but I wasn't sure. It wasn't that they wouldn't let you hold a party – that would have been against the law as a matter of fact – it was that because they wanted to know where the parties were – there are so many now – so the police could be informed and know how to keep the traffic moving. I made a discrete phone call to the East Hampton Town Clerk.

"Hello, this is Boris Kowalsaki." I said. "I've just moved to East Hampton" (I've lived here fifty years) "and someone told me there's a new law that you need to have a permit to have a private party."

"Yes," the clerk said. "If you have fifty or more people. The permit is free but and you need to apply twenty-one days in advance. When's your party?"

We didn't have twenty-one days, I thought.

"Sometime in late August," I lied. "But we haven't decided on the exact date. I'll call again."

And I slammed down the phone before she put through a trace. As the party day drew closer I began to rationalize the fact that we didn't have a permit. Perhaps the law said fifty or more adults. Of course, not very many juniors own automobiles so even if there were 200, there probably would only be thirty cars. Wait a minute, there would be no cars, there would be limousines. What I'll do, I thought, is one or two days before the event I'll just casually call the police to let them know that we're having the prom night party. I really did want them to know there'd be a bunch of stretches with glowing lights parked along Three Mile Harbor Road.

The day before the party I did call them up.

"Is Chief Scott in?" I said in my most confident tone. "This is Dan Rattiner from Dan's Papers."

Chief Scott goes back almost as far as I do.

"No, he's not." The desk officer said. "He'll be in a little later. Can I help you with anything?"

"Yes," I said. "I just wanted to let you know that I'm going to be holding the post junior high school prom party at our house on Three Mile Harbor Road. There'll be a lot of limos out, we'll have

This Saturday is the rededication of the Victor D'Amico Art Barge in Amagansett. The event, which will feature an historical exhibit of the forty year history of the barge. And on hand will be Francesca Rosenburg from the Museum of Modern Art for the rededication ceremony.

Author Salman Rushdie, often seen in the Hamptons, has apparently had some of the silver screen stardust of this area rub off on him. He will have a role in the upcoming film Bridget Jones' Diary.

Last Monday there was a book launch at the Sagaponack home of Gloria Jones (widow of author James Jones and mother of novelist Kaylie Jones) at her home in Bridgehampton for Shana Alexander's book The Astonishing Elephant.

The new film by Amagansett's Kim Basinger, Out of Africa, has come out to lukewarm reviews. Though it may be a disappointment, there is certainly a long and wonderful road ahead for this Oscar-winning actress.

Plans are moving ahead for the Music Festival of the Hamptons to take place in July for nine days. The festival will include an opening gala with Lukas Foss and the Elysium Quartet, pianist Scott Dunn, George Plimpton as the Newsman in a revival of Mr. Gershwin Goes to Washington presented by Steven Blyer and a closing gala, celebrating jazz, Broadway and cabaret with New York cabaret star Mary Cleere Haran and soprano Collen Fitzpatrick presenting songs of Southampton's Richard Adler and other special guests.

Kelsey Grammer, star of TV's Frasier is reportedly suing Bettie Wyson of Dunemere Real Estate for renting him a mansion adjacent to another mansion on the beach under construction in Sagaponack. The lawsuit says that Wyson should have warned Grammer of all the noise. The amount involved is said to be $100,000.

Friday night at Club Collete there will be a cocktail reception for sculptor Hal Buckner, one of the community's leading sculptors.

Sunday afternoon, Jessica and Jerry Seinfeld, will make perhaps their first public appearance in the Hamptons at the Hamptons Concours D'Elegance an award luncheon featuring the winners of the classic and antique car show presented that weekend. There are reportedly photo ops but no interviews. It's at Sayre Park, Snake Hollow Road, Bridgehampton.

James Brady will be reading from his fabulous and stunning new novel, The Marines of Autumn,

The New York Times was very "Hamptonish" this past Sunday. Dan Rattiner was featured in an article explaining his avant garde approach to writing and the photo that accompanied said it all. A picture was worth a thousand words.

Keeping with the beach theme a few pages later, you could see and read about an amazing impromtu sand sculpture of a woman done by an internationally acclaimed artist, Jeff Muhs of Southampton who just happens to be one of our cover artists. Michael Perez, another one of our cover artists gave a hand... Ahh... We mean he sculpted the hands of the woman. Only in the Hamptons!

Amy Zerner, whose striking collage, "Sex," adorned the cover of last week's Dan's Papers, has been acknowledged by the selection committee of Bridgehampton's Leonard Riggio's BarnesAndNoble.com's new Prints and Posters online museum shop as one of the most important (and prolific) artists of our time. You can buy a poster of "Sex" or any one of the 176 NEA award-winning collages she has created for the series of illustrated books by Zerner and her author husband, Monte Farber. She is the only living woman artist to be included in BN.com's prestigious Individual Artists and Illustrators collection, joining Maxfield Parrish, Norman Rockwell, Alphonse Mucha and Toulouse-Lautrec.

John Roland is a very sought after M.C. for Hampton Events. Last week at the Dan's Papers Art Cover Auction at WHBPAC, next on line... the East End Hospice Summer Gala on June 24.

Wines By Morrell

Possibly one of the most attractive wine shops in the country is presently in East Hampton. Located at 74 Montauk Highway in the Red Horse Shopping Mall, the shop features an extensive collection of representative wines and spirits from around the world including a large number of cold sakes, the finest wines from Long Island, summer roses, and a knowledgeable staff focused on service. The shop also features a climate controlled wine vault (Old & Rare Room), antique wine posters, wine antiques on consignment and a wine tasting area highlighted by a seven foot diameter tunneau or wine barrel built in Paris in 1850.

Various old wine and liquor bottles adorn the interior and one can find old maderas from the late 1800's as well as large casks of whisky from 1865 still in their original wooden enclosures.

Starting on Memorial Day Weekend and continuing each week on Saturdays from 4-7 p.m., the store will conduct wine tastings with various vineyards and producers featuring their best wines. In additional to the complementary wine, each presenter will share details about the wine, how it was made and how it should be served. An extensive collection of wines and spirits and friendly service make Wines By Morrell an exciting and unique shop to drop by and surround yourself in wine memorabilia and good conversation. So come on by and sit around the outdoor water fountain while sipping a cool glass of whatever suits your fancy.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S., and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Dr. Janet Stoess-Allen, our orthodontist, believes in early orthodontic intervention for those children who will clearly benefit from it. Early treatment presents the opportunity to influence jaw growth in a positive manner, lower risk of trauma to protruded upper incisors, correct harmful oral habits, and improve esthetics and self-esteem!

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is genuinely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling — and their parents, too!

AT STONY BROOK AN INCREDIBLE JOURNEY BEGINS WITH A CARDBOARD BOAT.

The annual student/faculty Roth Pond Regatta. The rules are simple: all boats must be homemade, and only six materials can be used—only two of which, duct tape and paint, resist water. The rewards are better: a chance to develop skills that will help the student to navigate through college.

In many ways, the Regatta is a metaphor for how we approach education at Stony Brook. Just as faculty and students must work together, the undergraduate experience must be a collaborative process between learning and life.

This kind of thinking has led to Stony Brook's becoming one of the top public research universities, as shown in a recent study published by Johns Hopkins University Press. In only forty years we've become the national model for undergraduate education at a research university.

This kind of environment has led to some of the world's most important discoveries. More importantly, it leads to a wonderful college experience. After all, the more you learn from the journey, the more you appreciate the destination.

Even in a cardboard boat.

THERE'S A LOT TO DISCOVER AT STONY BROOK

- The most distant galaxies were discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- The cause of Lyme disease was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- Bar code technology was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- The link between smoking and emphysema was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.
- The world's most primitive fossil bird was discovered by Stony Brook faculty.

Stony Brook is an affirmative action/equal opportunity educator.

The New York Times

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1996

$25 and Under | Eric Asimov

From the "now you see it, now you don't" department:

For years, the southeast corner of 75th Street and Third Avenue was held down by Juanita's, a Tex-Mex margarita mill with the kind of enclosed sidewalk cafe that was popular in the 1970's. Then Juanita's closed and the space was completely transformed by its new owners into Bistro le Steak. Can you guess the specialty?

The new restaurant has been open six weeks, but it looks as if it's been there forever, or at least since the 70's. Judging by its brass fittings, burnished wood, tile floor and artificially tarnished tin ceiling, the owners dutifully followed the outline for How to Look Like a Parisian Bistro.

It's tempting to pass off Bistro le Steak as a too obvious marketing scheme. The father-and-son owners, Herb and Greg Wetanson, also own Dallas BBQ and Tony's Di Napoli, more noteworthy as concepts than as restaurants. And French is hot now, right?

The surprise is that Bistro le Steak hardly strikes a false note. It does looks Parisian. The friendly staff conveys warmth and informality, and the food is both good and an excellent value. By staying away from the most expensive steak, it is possible to keep the tab under $25.

Bistro le Steak

1309 Third Avenue, at 75th Street, Manhattan, (212)517-3800.
Best dishes: Country pâté, mussels, shrimp St. Tropez, house salad, Parisian cut sirlion; filet mignon, chocolate cake, lemon tart.
Price range: $20 to $30
Credit cards: All major cards.
Hours: 5 P.M. to midnight daily
Wheelchair access: Entrance is one step up; restrpoms are downstairs.

The restaurant wisely sticks to the basics: country pâté ($5) is a good place to start. The big serving actually includes both a moist pâté and a smooth, flavorful duck terrine, surrounded by a little salad and cornichons. Mussels ($6.50) are delicate, steamed in white wine and garlic, a sauce that calls out for sopping it up with bread. Shrimp St. Tropez ($7.50) is another big appetizer, the shrimp sautéed with garlic, tomatoes and artichoke hearts. I prefer the house salad ($4.50), with its mustardy dressing, over a sampling of marinated vegetables ($5.50).

Yes, the specialty is steak, with five choices. My favorite is the least expensive, the Parisian cut sirlion ($14), firm and ful of beefy flavor, served with a mountain of wonderfully crisp, salty fries and a pitcher of Provencal mustard-and-white-wine sauce that seemed superfluous. I didn't try the New York cut sirloin, which was too expensive for this column at $20 and is simply a bigger steak.

The New York rib eye ($16) is quite good, though not so flavorful as the sirlion. Filet mignon, offered plain ($16) and au poivre ($17), is perfectly tender, though also not so beefy. It's a better candidate for Provencal sauce.

The menu also offers poultry, fish and pasta alternatives, and though I might be tempted by a main course order of the mussels with fries ($12), why stray from the specialty?

I wish wines were as good a value as the food. The Brouilly, Château de la Chaize 1994, is excellent, but $21 seems too much for a bottle of Beaujolais.

Desserts are terrific. I especially liked the rich, dense chocolate cake with dried berries hidden in it ($5) and the exuberant lemon tart ($5).

While Bistro le Steak seemed to sprout from nowhere, its owners say they were inspired by Le Steak, a similarly simple restaurant that had a 25-year run on Second Avenue near 57th Street. Maybe this bistro does have history on its side.

"Best Wine Shop In America!" —DECANTER MAGAZINE

"Diversity is a necessity," says Michael Aaron, Chairman of Sherry-Lehmann: 'We are proud to offer something for everyone.' As well as its huge shop, packed with a $10 million inventory including outstanding selections from Bordeaux, Burgundy, New Zealand, South Africa and Italy, Sherry-Lehmann sells wine via the mail to its 220,000 plus mailing list and over the internet."

"New York City's #1 Wine Shop" —ZAGAT SURVEY

"Bacchus never had it so good: top-rated for quality, the 'Rolls-Royce' of wine shops boasts 'the city's deepest selection of expensive wines, including older Bordeaux,'...'shopping in this 'well-appointed' East Side space can make you feel 'to the manor born;' run by the Aaron family since shortly after Prohibition, it pioneered the mail-order business...only part of the 'incredible selection' is on display so ask to see the big book on the counter."

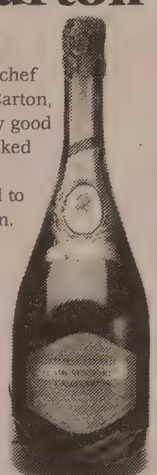
Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special of Lucas Carton

FROM ALAIN SENDERENS



Alain Senderens, the renowned chef of Paris' famed restaurant Lucas Carton, explains: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvée of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After much research M. Vranken created Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special Lucas Carton.

THE TASTE

It is a very dry Champagne that imparts a buttery flavor on the palate and it was created to be consumed with the cuisine of my beloved restaurant." (1140)

CAPTURING THE HEART OF THE HAMPTONS FOR OVER 7 YEARS

Hamptons Video Guide, founded in the early 1990's by producer/director Dee Du Bois, has captured the East End in an extensive library of 16mm film and video footage that is being archived on the new netStyleTV.com web site. The web site will soft launch this weekend, with a hard launch scheduled July 4th. Streaming video is featured in the site's Moving Image Library, with an archive of over 100,000 Hamptons images that can be viewed in slide show format, and in the web site's Image Vault. An online art gallery exhibiting photography and original artworks, can also be accessed, with images from world renowned photographers, such as; Terry O'Neill, portrait photographer of the stars; George Forss, scenics from across the USA; and Russian photographer, Igor Gnevashev. The web site's Hamptonian news reports which can be found in the Hamptons Style section of netStyleTV.com will feature investigative news stories, "that none of the local papers and magazines will touch, because they're to controversial!" stated Ms. Du Bois. You can log-on for the soft launch now, and visit again for the hard launch of netStyleTV.com on July 4th!

Hamptons Video Guide 2000, a highly informative lifestyles guide to the Hamptons, will be available beginning June 10th at all BookHampton locations. Retailing at $14.95, 100% of video sale profits are being donated to the environmental organization Group For The South Fork. Ms. Du Bois stated, "As we venture forth into the new millennium, preservation of the environment, and quality of life issues on the East End are of paramount importance, and I see Group For The South Fork as the East End's worthiest not-for-profit that should be supported by everyone in this community."

The Hamptons Video Guide will be on location this weekend capturing the launch of summer 2000 to include in it's new release. "We want to include some very current footage in this next video, which is a compilation of Hamptons Video Guide highlights spanning the past seven years," said Ms. Du Bois. A Dining Out feature in the video focuses on the winners of the highly coveted, Jaguar Award of Excellence for the Best in Dining Out. Winners were chosen based on cuisine, service, attitude of staff, and decor. Word of mouth, over-all restaurant reviews, and random diners sent to the establishments by Hamptons Video Guide, were all factors that were taken into consideration when choosing the winning restaurants.

An edited version of the Hamptons Video Guide will be broadcast on cablevision every weekend throughout the summer season. You can log onto netStyleTV.com and go to the Hamptons Television Network section of the web site for the broadcast times and dates. The 2000 edition of Hamptons Video Guide features cover photography by Davis Gaffga along with spectacular Hamptons scenics by renowned photographer George Forss. The broadcasts and video include the new Jaguar S-TYPE promo spots with STING, produced by Ogilvy & Mather. A longer version of the STING spot, rarely seen, has been included in the video guide program. Anyone interested in test driving the amazing new Jaguar S-TYPE can call 877 548 4336. With the launch of netStyleTV.com (life styles of the world's premier destinations, all based on the original Hamptons concept) producer Dee Du Bois has expanded the original production into a worldwide multimedia conglomerate, following the blueprints for Hamptons Video Guide, Hamptons Style (a new tie-in printed reference guide), Hamptons Television Network, and netStyleTV.com... all registered trademarks of her new production company, United Multimedia Productions, Inc. Local businesses and corporations can participate in the next release of the Hamptons Video Guide, Hamptons Style publication, television broadcasts, or get on the netStyleTV.com web site by calling United Multimedia Productions at 877 752 2244. Don't miss the TV broadcasts this summer, in the Hamptons, Manhattan and Tri-State. They're bound to be exciting!

security, it should be alright. We haven't sent out an invitation to Puffy Combs, so if he shows up, we'll send him away. The party should run from 9 to 2, then the kids go to Finazzo's for breakfast in Montauk."

"Thanks," the officer said. "We'll keep an eye on it."

That morning Cathie had written a note on some personal stationary of mine. It was the kind you get from Tiffany's to thank people for gifts or a dinner party. She had three of them. The note read: Dear Neighbor, We wanted to let you know that Saturday night here at our house we will be hosting the after junior prom party. We feel it is very important for the kids to have a safe, secure chaperoned environment. We and a few more parents will be here all evening. We will try to keep the hoopla down and thank you in advance for helping these great kids have their night. Our best, Dan and Cat.

I stuck the note in three mailboxes of our nearest neighbors.

We really did have security. Cathie had hired two big burly guys, one of whom, Malcolm Myrick, works for Myrick and Sons and the other, Marcus Harding who has worked as a bouncer at one of the local clubs.

"The kids don't want their parents downstairs," she said. "They want to feel they could do this themselves. But the bouncers will be there and our teenagers will know it."

"Where are we?" I asked.

"We're upstairs." Cathie said. "Watching TV. I rented the video Stuart Little. It's about a mouse that talks, highest grossing movie from two years ago."

The night before the party we got several phone calls from parents. Are you really having this party? They wanted to know. Their daughter or son was coming over, they wanted to make sure there would be adults present.

We'd be present; we'd be watching a talking mouse.

One man called and seemed very angry.

"Are you serving liquor?" he wanted to know.

"These kids are seventeen." Cathie said. "It's soda and chips."

"They'll be coming in with bottles of liquor and drugs under their coats."

"We've hired security," Cathie said.

"You know you'll be completely liable if something goes wrong," the man said.

The two security men were only one of two minor expenses we incurred in holding this party. The other was to go to the Bridgehampton Country Market and buy thirty bottles of Adirondack soda in a variety of flavors. You can get two liters of Adirondack for 89 cents; we also got lots of pretzels, salsa, chips, peanuts and dip.

The afternoon of the party was one of the very few times our teenagers helped decorate the house without grumbling. It was raining off and on so Cathie hung tarps over the trellises. Furniture was moved out of the living room and Cathie had it put, not only in an adjacent bedroom but to my horror in my study. There was no way I could get in there. I personally spent much of the afternoon trying to get the swimming pool in tip top shape, using shock, chlorine, PH minus, pH plus, alkaline clarifier, and every other toxic but legal chemical I could find. One of our teenagers who was not going to the prom, Marak, moved the desk out onto the upstairs balcony overlooking the living room and set up the full scale DJ system that he had saved almost $2600 in order to buy the year before. He would DJ until eleven, then when the prom let out one of the other teenagers, Gabriel, would take over and he would mingle downstairs.

Around 9:30 in the evening, the guests began to arrive – those that had not gone to the prom – and the DJ was thumping away and we were up in the bedroom watching a movie Palmetto on Channel 56 because the talking mouse had gotten jammed in the VCR. The windows were rattling, the two bouncers had not shown up, and as time went by, Cathie began pacing and trying to reach one of them on her portable phone. There was nothing doing. It wasn't long before we began

Taxi!

Wretched Reminiscences Of A Taxi Driver In The Fabulous Hamptons

By Jerry Cimisi

So one May some years ago I thought I could earn a living driving a cab in the Hamptons for the summer season. I wouldn't be driving your normal type taxi, with the little light/sign on the roof, but a luxury car: a Mercedes. The company (no longer in business – I had nothing to do with that) had a half dozen Mercedes that would be picking people up both locally and for trips to the airport and into the city.

It turned out to be five weeks of hell.

It started out innocently enough. I would work each weekend, Friday through Sunday, from noon to midnight each day: twelve hours a day on the busiest days of the week. I would be making a small hourly rate, plus tips. I figured in the Hamptons the tips would be good.

But the first Friday I drove things were slow. "Well, it's still just the middle of May," said the boss. "In two weeks you won't be able to stop."

Unfortunately he was right.

It was a new company – it had started the year before – and of course the attraction was that people could be ferried about in a Mercedes, whether to go to the supermarket in Southampton or a disco in Westhampton or catch a plane to Europe at JFK. The Mercedes were used, but in good condition. Ironically, at least I thought it was ironic, this fleet of luxury cars was housed down a dirt road. The drivers were cautioned to go slowly on the road, not only to keep from jarring our precious vehicles on the various ruts and gullies, but to keep from kicking up too much of a dust storm that would, obviously, coat the cars with a disagreeable film. The cars were also parked beneath trees that were shedding pollen and seed pods this time of year. So the cars had to be cleanead regularly.

The "office" was a revamped cottage, more like a large shed. The dispatcher/boss/co-owner was a young, heavyset guy who had driven a taxi for another local company and had gone into partnership with an older, man with an accent I could not quite pinpoint. The dispatcher had an encylopedic knowledge of every street, back road, shortcut, you name on the South Fork, and because I said I had lived in the area for a long time he assumed I was almost as knowledgeable at first. Now I thought I did know the roads pretty well, certainly the main ones at least, but I soon found, when I picked up a fare at the Southampton train station and a passager said he was going to Down East Lane and I asked where was that an dhe said, "It's right off of Captain's Neck Lane," as if of course everyone knows where that is, I'd have to appear stupid and just ask him to direct me. Not only did I discover there were streets and little byways I had never been on before in all my years in the area, but streets which I knew I did not know by name. I knew how to drive from Point A to Point B, but I didn't know the names of all the streets in between.

At any rate, to ask the fares to involve themselves in you showing you the way to their destination would annoy more than a few of them. They were there to be taken hither and yon at their command, I was there to figure out how to get them there and do it quickly, dammit.

Yeah, the taxi business was a fast business. On Fridays people were getting off the Jitney or the train and their attitude was "I've got to hurry up and relax." You picked up someone from the Jitney took them to some over-priced development in North Sea, was reminded by the dispatcher (it was the first time I ever used a CB) that the train was due in at the station, and arrived just as it was rumbling in. There were several taxis there, from other companies, waiting like vultures for their prey. There was plenty of prey, of course, and one was guaranteed to get a fare, zip them to their destination then be back in town (or thereabouts) to take some old lady from Cobb Isle Road in Water Mill shopping at the A & P then pick someone up who had been accumulating up some tres chic purchases on Job's Lane and taking them down to Dune Road. I remember in particular a mother and daughter, extremely fashionably dressed, with hats, discussing the imminent events of the weekends in the way the rich talk in the presence of their servants, in other words, as if I were not there. I took a good deal of affront to this, though of course remained polite. At least I didn't have to ask them where Dune Road was.

I was getting sick of people by the second weekend. I would pick up a group of kids at the western edge of Southampton who were going to some pub in Hampton Bays. One asked me if I would pick them up at three in the morning, "I'm off at midnight," I said.

"We'll give you fifty dollars."

"Call the company, maybe somebody will be still driving then."

Then there were the local fares that came to four dollars and who left you a quarter tip. Or the ones who didn't leave you a tip. Whether you got tips or not, the only way you could make money with local fares was to do a lot of them, bam, bam, bam, back to back to back, constantly throughout the day, zooming in and out of the increasing trafficked main streets, finding the most obscure back roads, picking up the fare, and figuring out the quickest shortcut to a destination almost as obscure. While I would be driving, perusing the map, calling the boss – who would say, "You mean you don't know where that is?"

It was the life of a manic slave. Late one Sunday, as the sun lowered in the west, I paused for the day's first respite in the parking lot of the Southamp,ton A&P, for once at peace, contemplating the gravestones in the cemetery nearby. Perhaps I was drawing pleasure in considering that here were some human beings who had no further destinations to nag anyone to take them to. Then the CB crackles and I'm being ordered to the northernmost point of North Sea, because some other cabbie who was supposed to pick up a couple at North Sea to catch the train back to the city hadn't shown up and they had to catch that train, etc., etc.,

So I leave the peacefulness of the dead and drive as fast as possible, exceeding the speed limit by no more than a reasonable amount and luckily I know where the road I'm going to is and I find two very pissed yuppie types with their suitcases at the end of the driveway.

"Your company was supposed to pick us up a half hour ago," the woman complained.

The train was due in ten minutes – or was it five? Whatever it was, I didn't think we'd make it. "Maybe, it'll be as few minutes late," I said tentatively, hopefully, trying to assuage the couple, while the woman went on about how her husband had to be in the city early in the morning because of something special with work and that there was no way they could have stayed overnighty anyway because she didn't have her toothbrush (I'm not making this up) and the dispatcher directed me, road by road, turn over a labyrinth of a shortcut I could never have remembered and I zoomed through the newly fallen dark and somewhere, in the distance, I heard an approaching train whistle and I prayed an animal would not dart out in front of us and thought: Why, am I doing this?

We pull into the station and the train is there. I beep the horn, knowing some conductors will be kind enough to hold the train another thirty seconds if they see someone pulling. The couple grab their lubbage and dash out. The man thrust the fare in my hand, and a ten dollar tip. "Thanks," he said. And they disappeared into the train, which immediately started westward.

I sat there more than a moment, looking numbly at the ten dollar bill in my half clutched hand. I thought was going mad.

Then there were the two accidents I had on one weekend, my second weekend on the job. Not that they were my fault, of course. I was on Windmill Lane in Southampton, The Southampton Press building on my right and Nugent Street, with the A&P on my left and I was about to pull up into the driveway of the Press, when a van creams me o n the right, bashing in the passengers front door.

I wasn't hurt and the workers in the van weren't hurt, but the door of the Mercedes was totalled. The other driver claimed I had stopped too short, I hadn't signalled. I know I had. At any rate, if he didn't think I was turning, he should not have been passing me on the right on a one lane road.

The police came, took statements, and I drove the car back to the office. The boss looked at it in dismay, but he gave me another one to drive.

That happened late Friday afternoon. Just after dark on Sunday I had another...incident. It had been a cloudy, rainy day. I hadn't gotten many fares. The CB ordered me to a street off of Hill Street in Southampton. I couldn't read one street sign from the road and I parked by the curb to get out and get a closer look at the sign.

I'm maybe forty, fifty feet away from the sign, peering at the letters which were partly obscured by a tree when I hear the screech of a car. The raod was wet from the off and on rain we'd been having all day and I watched in absolute horror as I saw a car skid right alongside the Mercedes and I instantly knew that the entire side of the car would be caved in.

I rush back to the corner where the Mercedes is parked and as I look in astonishment at the side of the car and can't see a scratch, the other car is stopping at the next corner. A man gets out and starts to walk towards me. He is plastered. Stewed. Drunk as can be. He staggers. He mumbles out, "is everything OK?"

"Well,, I don't see – " But then I do – a small scratch on the rearwheel well. Not the devastation I had thought would occur, but enough damage so I said, "I'm going to have to call my boss."

The drunk was staggering around me. "Hey, we can settle this. "Why don't you come over my house?"

Yeah, right. I was calling the boss on the CB. "You're not going to believe this, but a drunk driver..."

"Stay there, I'm calling the police."

But the inebriated gentleman had other ideas. He certainly didn't want to be found drunk by the police at any accident, no matter how slight. He staggered as quickly as possible back to his car. I knew he was going to take off. I raced up, close enough to get his license plate number and he drove off into the night.

The police came. I gave the officer the plate

What The Pianoman Said

The Artist Formerly Known As "Joel Of East Hampton" Delivers College Commencement

By Janna Cord

The Piano Man has returned to the East End – for an afternoon anyway. Legendary singer/songwriter Billy Joel came back to the Hamptons last Sunday to give the commencement address at Southampton College of Long Island University and to receive an Honorary Doctorate of Music degree. "This is actually the fourth Doctorate I've received," he mused before the ceremony, "not bad for a guy who didn't graduate high school."

On an unusually murky and chilly May afternoon, Joel arrived on campus looking tan, rested and relaxed. He bantered with reporters and seemed to be genuinely enjoying the experience. When asked if he missed the area, he replied, "This time of year is the nicest time of year, it also gets to be the silliest time of year – I kinda miss how it was a few years back." He does, however, make certain to point out that he hasn't abandoned the Hamptons. "I have a business here, an office here, a daughter here, so I'm going to be here quite a bit. I'm still involved with this area, it's just not where my house will be." He has already agreed to return again this July to present a Master Class in East Hampton to benefit his ex-wife Christie Brinkley's cause the STAR Foundation. He says he is doing it both because he genuinely believes it's a good cause but "also as a favor to her."

In preparing to give his fourth commencement address, Joel clearly felt the distinction of being chosen and recognized. He wasn't, however, able to bring any personal well wishers, as his new girlfriend, and Channel 12 reporter, Trish Bergin also happened to be giving her own commencement address Sunday at Suffolk Community College. They wrote their speeches in the same room, he admits, but they didn't copy each other. His mother had planned to attend, but had to go to the dentist instead. However, Joel didn't seem to mind going solo as he did bring along his new puppy Fanula to help him celebrate. Although he's now a four-time veteran up at the podium, Joel claims that he tries to make his speeches different each time, "I don't want to keep repeating myself," he exclaimed. Although after thinking about it a second he admitted, "I'm probably saying the same thing, but in a different way."

Either way, the class of 2000 was clearly thrilled that Joel had agreed to speak at its graduation and even the ever strengthening rainfall didn't seem to dampen their spirits one bit. During some opening remarks, the school's Chancellor Robert Sillerman, announced, to everyone's great surprise, that he and his wife Laura had agreed to donate an unprecedented $15 million to Southampton College. That was followed by a welcome from Senator Charles Shumer, who kept his comments brief as he wanted to catch the 3:40 tip off of the Knick's playoff game; then the honorary degrees were presented. Joel was received with a cacophonous roar as he approached the podium to receive his degree and address the graduates. His pithy speech was introspective as well as humorous. He began light heartedly, telling the graduates "it's an honor to be here with you today. I've been asked to speak at other commencements – I'm still not sure why," and continued more seriously, "I really have no great insight into how to achieve success. I became a performing artist, a recording artist and a rock and roll star through pure serendipity. I don't know of any special formula that will insure great personal fortune – hell, I lost as much money as I made over the years."

"Since I sold my house to Jerry, it's going to be more expensive than ever to live out here... you're going to need a very lucrative job."

He admitted that good luck and good timing were probably just as important in life as a good education, although he admitted, "owning some nice waterfront property out here didn't hurt." He did want to apologize to any of the graduates who where planning to make their homes out on the East End, because, as he put it "Since I sold my house to Jerry, it's going to be more expensive than ever to live out here. So, if that is your intention, you are going to need a very lucrative job." He is referring, of course, to the record setting $40 million dollar sale of his East Hampton estate to Jerry and Jessica Seinfeld this past year. When speaking of receiving his Doctorate of Music degree, he joked that even though he never graduated from high school, here he was receiving his fourth such degree. "It's honorary of course," he chuckled "but it will still look nice on the wall." He eventually concluded, "that and an EZ Pass will get me over the Triborough Bridge."

On a serious note, Joel shared his gratitude for having found a job that he loves. He claims he went into music simply to make a living, and the rest just sort of happened. "My job became my friend, my fortune and my great love." He hopes that the graduates will be true to themselves and maybe some will even use their newfound knowledge to "preserve and protect what's left of this island." He reminded them that the commercial fisherman are being driven out of business by the dying scallops, oysters and lobsters, and that the farmers out here are struggling just to survive. "Maybe those of you who love this place can make a life keeping our island alive." In wrapping things up, Joel offered the graduates one last piece of advice. "Try to remember who you are at this very moment for the rest of your life," he began, "In your future whenever you are unsure of what the smart move is, the person you are at this moment will always know what the right move is and if you can stay constant to what you know is the right thing then you'll always be able to achieve your own personal fulfillment, which is what life is supposed to be all about, isn't it?"

He then ended on a musical note with an acappella song he composed just for the occasion. He announced, "This one's a freebie, OK?" He began thumping his hands on the podium and belted out his first verse. "Come on everybody take a trip with me down Route 27 from the LIE, Oh there's plenty things to learn there is plenty things to do at the Southampton campus of L.I.U. Well, I've told you everything I was going to say at the Southampton College graduation day."

The call and response caused the crowd to clap along with the rhythm and The Entertainer's verses written just for them sent the graduates erupting into wild applause. Although the Hamptons will miss Billy Joel, last Sunday's enthusiastic reception made it quite clear that he is welcome back anytime. • number. The located the miscreant, easy enough, but he denied everything. He said he didn't know what they were talking about and demanded the police leave his property. "We know this guy's a drunk," an officer told me, "but since no one was injured there was nothing we could do if he denied it."

Over the CB the boss said, "I think you've had enough for one weekend. Why don't you come back to the office..I'll send somebody out for that fare."

When I came to work next Friday, the boss said, "We've only got six cars. You put two of them in the shop. You think you could take it easy this weekend?"

Then there were the trips to the airport. This was where you made the real money, got a decent tip, and could be away from the mad weekend traffic of the Hampton. Well, I found that if one escaped the Hamptons, the airport trips were their own torture.

On my first trip to Kennedy I made the wrong turnoff before the airport and was wandering about some rundown neighborhood in Queens, afraid that with my Mercedes and sunglasses I looked like a local drug dealer but I finally asked someone directions and got to the airport. I was late in picking up my fare but at least the lady was understanding. On other airport trips I found the terminals easily enough but took some time in finding out just where I could park. One of my fares who was supposed to be waiting for me at one place had moved to another and when I called the dispatcher and he told me where she was now and I went there she had gone back to the original spot and when I went back there she had gone back to the second spot. Finally we hooked up. In all, if one made more on a trip to the airport, you spent so many hours on the one fare that it worked out to just about the same as when cruising about the mad, mad Hamptons for an equal number of hours doing shorter fares.

After midnight each Sunday I would come home absolutely wrung out from the tension of dealing with people, finding destinations, fighting with the traffic – trying dealing with Southampton Main Street at noon on Saturday or Hamptons Bays at eleven at night. I couldn't imagine doing this the entire summer. The madness of the Memorial Day weekend had been exhausting. I remember, as if it had been an omen, pulling out into the North Sea intersection to begin driving for that weekend and the car right in front of me was hit by a car alongside it. I was delayed as I extricated myself from a sudden tangle of traffic around the accident.

It was my last airport trip that made me throw in the towel completely. It was the Sunday of the first weekend in June. I was to pick up a model in East Hampton at five. She had to catch an eight o'clock plane at LaGuardia. Now it shouldn't

Atlantis

A 120,000 Gallon Shark Tank, A Live Coral Reef And A Rain Forest In Riverhead

By Janet Berg

When I asked my son, Jeffrey, to join me for the ride into Riverhead, he assumed I was headed for the Tanger Mall, but I had other plans for the twenty-year-old college student and environmentalist.

As we pulled up to 431 E. Main Street in downtown Riverhead, in front of large Greek ruins, I saw his jaw drop open. "What, is that?" he asked with enthusiasm. Traffic behind us also slowed down to gape at such a sight. Finally, the long-awaited Aquarium is becoming a reality, although it feels like a fantasy, themed after the Lost City of Atlantis. At the entrance, you can envision earthquakes and floods that may have submerged the lost empire over 1000 years ago.

We pass by the open seal exhibit and sperm whale jumping out of a waterless fountain that will come to life for the public on Memorial Day Weekend. Once inside, the new aquarium, the obviously pleased director of marketing, Michael Davidson, whose hard work, along with many others, is now coming to fruition, greets us. He tells us that aside from all the natural treasures that Long Island has to offer, it also houses the Riverhead Foundation for Marine Research and Preservation.

Soon, we are introduced to artist, Eric Henn, who was in the middle of painting a 100 ft. by 24 ft. wall. "The sky takes thirteen shades of blue," he tells us; it gives the illusion of the sky meeting the horizon. Then I'll have a thunderstorm coming up on this tropical lagoon, adding drama to it."

Eric is not intimidated by the size, as he's been on the road for the past 15 years, painting huge wrap-around murals on 40,000 sq. foot water towers and oil storage tanks.

"We found him in Ohio, Michael said, as if he were a hidden treasure, "he worked at a museum in the Newport Aquarium in Kentucky, right across the river from Cincinnati."

In Phase I, some of the exhibits include the largest live coral reef in North America, a 120,000-gallon shark tank, the Amazon Rain Forest, and seal and sea lion displays (50,000 sq. ft.) Outside, there will be a picnic area, an Eco-habitat trail and pond, and wetlands that you can walk through, along the beautiful Peconic River.

Phase II of the project, which will be completed in the spring of 2002, will include a 1,000-seat exhibition stadium featuring dolphins, sea lions, and otters. Phase III will include a 12,000 sq. foot glass enclosed rainforest and a 400,000-gallon coral reef lagoon tank, etc., with a completion date of spring, 2004.

Michael also informed us, "By the time we finish our build-outs, we'll have 100,000 sq. ft., which brings you up to a nationally sized aquarium. But even at this stage, we'll have a lot of exhibits. The average visit to Phase I could be a two hour plus visit; and if you add the tour boat onto it, it could be a five hour stay."

Mr. Davidson took us on a journey, which started us out over a wooden bridge that spanned a sand shark lagoon. It tells the story of Long Island, as one side views the North Shore with its bluffs and rocky shores, and the other side, the South Shore of marsh and the sea going out into the Atlantic.

"There will be storyboards telling how Long Island was formed, Michael explained. "Underneath you some of our local fish will be swimming by, like sandtiger sharks, striped bass and blackfish, and just look at those mussels growing on the piling."

See all the ruins," he continued, without coming up for air. In the same breath, he went on, "and at the end over there, will be a twenty-two-foot waterfall circulating about 400 gallons of water per minute, which will be part of the circulation system of this tank."

This will all be well-lit until you enter the grand pillars of the Lost Atlantis, which we like to think, happened right here in Riverhead," he laughed. In the architecture, we constructed, we purposely used the effect of cracks and seashells embedded in the concrete walls."

As we turned the bend, and walked through the washed out coral cave, we happened to run into Poseidon, the majestic god of the sea, with trident in hand. "When we wow people," he told us, "the wow will lead to the why?" The idea is for the scientific education to also be exciting entertainment.

Passing by the shark tank, we observed the six low wrap-around windows (twenty feet high, forty feet around) designed for a 'hands-on' education. "We expect our staff will be here a lot, cleaning these windows," he laughed, knowing it will be well worth it.

In the 120,000-gallon tank, there will not only be white tips sharks, southern stingrays, moray eels and a whole variety of fish, there will also be communication between the visitors and the diver in the tank through their sound system.

Also, there will be tons of inserts, with ruins of roads and statues, and aside from keeping it visually pleasing, Michael informed us, "We want to keep our inventory (the fish, of course) happy. He pointed to a large pipe. "The moray eels like to be in closed and protected places."

"I know," my son, who is also a lifeguard and a diver, told him. "I found that out the hard way."

Because they emphasize a strong educational component, there will also be a classroom setting with seats positioned in front of a large screen. "Once the program comes to an end," the director continued, "the screen comes up and a real shark is looking you right in the face."

"We think we'll book 125,000 to 160,000 school kids per year, between schools and camps. We're positioning ourselves to be the leading marine educational facility on Long Island. In fact, as of April 24, we will be officially announcing the formation of a "Marine Education Partnership" with the prestigious Cornell Cooperative Extension Marine Division."

We learned that all sponsorships sold at the aquarium goes to the Riverhead Foundation and to the educational program; none of the money goes toward building the aquarium.

Managing partners are Jim Bissett and Joseph Petrocelli, who have researched and visited forty or fifty aquariums throughout the country and know what is impressive to the public of all ages. My son and I had the pleasure of meeting one of the partners (thirty-seven year old) Jim Bissett, and immediately discovered he was a real people-person. We talked about the thrill of the project. He equated it, as he reminisced about swimming in the Caribbean with his own children and his wife among the monstrous stingrays."They told me, "Yeah,we'd like to feed the stingray; but as soon as the whole group of stingray swam towards us, my wife and three kids all jumped on my back."

As he shared this little story with us, it became obvious that the world under the sea is an exciting place to Jim, which he wants to share with others.

We also met with designer, Don McGranaghan, who explained the process of manufacturing the big columns; they started off with metal, sprayed it with cement and threw sand on the base and pushed texture pads made out of sculpted rubber into it, to give it authenticity.

There will also be a 6 ft 5" robotic Poseidon, and he'll be programmed with three different scripts, telling about the history of Atlantis.There are touch tanks that look like a spa, with water pouring out of Poseidon's mouth, and that the kids can step up to. They'll be able to touch horseshoe crabs and spider crabs and starfish and so on, and the staff will be on the sides, encouraging the interaction.

"Over here," the director went on, "we'll have the indoor café, which seats 120, plus outside seating. We'll have two rides. He then opened up a simulator ride for fifteen people. "This one will be more of a cartoony ride through the Lost City and the other more of a scientific ride through a coral reef."

Then we met marine biologist, Rob DiGiovanni, who brought us into the Amazon exhibit where there is amazing looking fish, such as the big yellow-tailed catfish. "That's our first resident," we were told. Actually, he was in somebody's home tank and he broke out and crashed through the tank and they called us and said, "Please, somebody come and get him."

"What's his name?" I inquired. But, Mr. Davidson said, There's gonna be 500 different species of fish, I can't get too personal."

While visiting the Foundation, where they rehabilitate between fifty to eighty animals per year, Rob introduced us to some incredible looking sea turtles, and he explained, "We get a lot of them in our waters during the summer, but if they stay too long, many of them get hypothermic. If they don't get help right away, it will become fatal."

Swimming in some of the tanks, was a six year-old loggerhead turtle (which can weigh up to 400 lbs.), a green sea turtle (which can weigh up to 500 lbs.), and Kemp's Ridley Sea Turtle (about 100 lbs.), which is the most endangered species of sea turtles in the world).

Suddenly, Michael Davidson talked about his daughter's experience with the turtles. "Jordana came to camp here last year," he said, "and they had these spider crabs races. The spiders that lost the race, were thrown to the turtles."

We saw the four different species of seals they have right now, which are the harp seal, the hooded seal, the gray seal and the harbor seal. They have a helpless expression in their large glassy-eyes, and we immediately wanted to 'pet' them.

But we were warned, "They look sweet, but they'll bite. Besides, we don't want to interact too much with them, because then it's tough to put them back in the wild."

After leaving the aquarium, my son and I knew what the director meant when he told us earlier, that the whole experience would "blow you out of the water."

Cycle Your Way Through The Woods From Bridgehampton To East Hampton

By Joan Zandell

Just yesterday I was thinking how great it would be to be able to ride my bike from Brideghampton where I live, to East Hampton without using the main roads. As a former New Yorker who grew up walking everywhere, when the weather turns warm, I long to leave my car at home and actually use my body which was designed to transport me through this lifetime, for something more dynamic than sitting behind the steering wheel of my car.

Apparently, a cyclist and environmentalist named Mike Bottini had a similar thought approximately ten years ago when he proposed a bike path. However, the original proposal languished on the back burners of bureaucracy. The now named South Fork Bikeway proposal suggests that the bike path run from the Bridgehampton Sagg Main Turnpike to Buckskill Road in East Hampton Town, approximately four miles in length slinking along the Long Island Rail Road right of way, and possibly continuing through public streets and private lots. And not surprisingly, the underlying issues appear to be money and control.

The Bridgehampton Citizens Advisory Committee has voted unanimously to oppose the South Fork Bikeway feeling that the proposed routes are unacceptable. They feel that the proposed path crosses heavily traveled roads and travels along roads that are too narrow for safe cycling. The Bridgehampton CAC would prefer the town use the $1.7 million share of the project costs for the repair of all ready existing but deteriorating roads. The Sagaponack CAC was not far behind suggesting that the town roads be repaired first. Sagg Main Street, Middle Line highway and Scuttle Hole Road were cited.

The Southampton Town Highway Department received approximately $4.4 million from the town last year, yet only $815,000 was used to repair roads. There is about $13 million, accumulating at the rate of $2 million each month, in the Community Preservation Fund that is available to purchase land, through which a bicycle path that meets everyone's needs could be built. Additionally, the existing project would be funded by an $11 million Federal Grant that is supervised by the State Department of Transportation. The grant requires that East Hampton and Southampton towns each contribute $1.7 million. With such tremendous sums of money available one might ask, how many feuding Hamptonites does it take to build a bicycle path?

Bridgehampton residents claim that they are concerned because they see the land around them disappearing to developers. Building a bicycle path might conceivably be a solution by which the land is preserved and cared for allowing cyclists and environmentalists the opportunity to enjoy it. Private individuals upon whose land the bike route might impinge, would be compensated financially and with the knowledge that the land that they love would continue to be cared for in a manner

FIRE ALAN GREENSPAN AND ACCEPT THE FUTURE

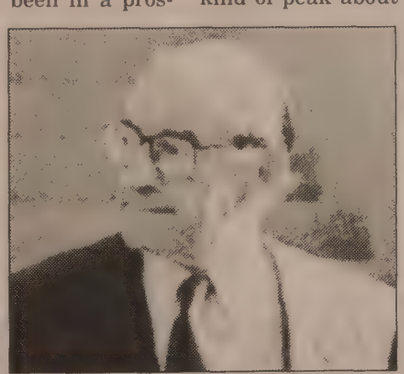
By Dan Rattiner

Alan Greenspan once again jacked up the price of borrowing money this past week. He raised the prime interest rate – the rate the government lends to the banks – one half of a percentage point, which translates to about 10% for a home improvement or mortgage loan. Just a year ago, this rate was around 7 1/2%. He says more is to come.

As a trend, it sure is strange. High interest rates are painful for the country, because everyone who does any borrowing has to pay more. Nobody, even the Fed, likes high interest rates. And so they use them, tablespoon full after tablespoon full, like medicine, to tamp down roaring inflation, which tends to occur after the country has a long period of prosperity.

Trouble is, so to speak, inflation rates are not going up. There seems no rhyme or reason for Greenspan's behavior.

Greenspan says that we have been in a prosperous situation so long that surely, unless he cranks up interest rates, the economy will fall into depression. It's like – here comes Dracula, I wave a wooden cross at him, he turns away.



My own opinion, as a sometimes borrower and now an angry sometimes borrower, is that Greenspan is a victim of his age.

Not our age, his age. And not the physical frailties of his age – he is seventy-two – but the age that he has lived through. Greenspan's entire professional career has spanned the period 1950-1999. During this time, the American economy went up to a kind of peak about 1973, then down to a bottom in 1980, then back up to a peak in 1988, then down to the bottom again. The 1988 peak was no better than the peaks that had come before. Indeed, economists talked until the mid 1990s about that wonderful time in 1973 when our prosperity was the highest.

The thing is that, since 1988, the economy has been growing and expanding to a whole new level of prosperity, coinciding with the collapse of our superpower rival the Soviet Union, and with the development

here," The officer said.

"We're doing our best," I said.

I really believe that the situation had been smoothed over where I had been very close to having been given a summons. Now, with the party officially over, the music was off, all the lights were being turned on and people were being escorted out. I went upstairs; Cathie was lying in bed fast alseep. The bitch. Then she rolled over.

"I hear some rustling in the closet," she said. I heard it too. I walked over to find two couples walking in from the deck beyond.

"Out, out," I said. They turned – I guess they were looking for a place to hide – and walked back out. From my window vantage point, I now saw there were at least three people sitting in my sailboat which was still on its trailer out in the driveway. "Out of the sailboat." I said. They climbed out. I went out into the upper hall and there were some people lined up to use the bathroom.

"Thank you for having the party for us, Mr. Rattiner." A girl said.

"Hey, as long as you had a good time," I said.

"We did," she said.

On the street, I could see that the police had left, but the crowd of kids remained, like at a bus stop. Occasionally a limousine would pull up and eight or twelve or sixteen of them would pile in, depending on the length of the limo and they'd drive off. Everyone was standing around talking animatedly.

I could see there was nobody in the living room at this time but there were a great many voices of people talking from our finished basement downstairs. I walked halfway down and saw a most unusual sight. Did you ever see those old black and white photographs taken during the London Blitz where the women and children have gone down into the "tube" and are sitting along the walls facing the subway tracks? That's what it looked like. About twenty people. Without the tracks.

David and Shavon

"Hey?" I said. "Are you guys leaving?"

"We have to wait for our limos." one of them said. "We sent them away and told them to be back around 2:30."

I looked at my watch; it was 1:40.

"Is it OK if we stay here?"

I saw the crowd outside. What I was doing here was harboring minors.

"Sure," I said. "Anybody here not have a good time, raise their hand." No hands went up. I went back upstairs.

Ten minutes later I was back on the basement steps to check on them. They were still talking happily, sitting on the chairs, sofas and mats, lining the outside walls. But now the lights were completely out except for a strobe light at one end of the room.

"Hey guys, you really ought to turn that strobe off, it gives you brain cancer." There were a few murmurs.

"I can feel it already," one of them said.

But then they turned the strobe off, then using the dimmer they turned the overhead lights on just a little.

"Who's that guy over there?" one of them said pointing at a boy lying asleep on a futon.

"He's from Westhampton Beach." somebody said.

"No, from Hampton Bays," another kid said.

"Well, that's not the Hamptons. Those are the fake Hamptons." a third kid said. Everyone stared at the sleeping form.

"We're the real Hamptons." another kid said. "We're the kids from rich East Hampton. We suck."

One kid pointed to the upright vacuum cleaner that was directly adjacent to this boy. "You got one right there," somebody said. The boy looked over. "That's us," he said. "Easy to turn on, sucks all night." Everybody laughed.

Who's Here:

Jay Chiat

Screaming Media.Com

By Dan Rattiner

In 1980, the successful southern California ad agency Chiat & Day opened offices on Madison Avenue. For the next fifteen years, this company was on the cutting edge of New York City advertising, winning awards for a wide variety of its clients, among them Apple Computer. They did the famous fascist Super Bowl commercial in 1984. Eveready Batteries campaign. The Eveready Bunny is their idea. And Nike, their whole campaign where they show a celebrity athlete without actually identifying him – it's assumed you'll know who that is – came from the mind of Jay Chiat who was the mastermind of much of this and with whom I'm sitting now. Chiat has been weekending and summering in the Hamptons for nearly a quarter of a century and has been witness to the dramatic changes that have taken place. In talking about it he inadvertently revealed a basic philosophy that he holds about life.

"Certainly it's not what it was when I first came." He said. "The focus now is very different but it's still a very special place and in spite of the changes when I come here I notice I always have a good time. So I'm staying."

Where I'm interviewing Jay Chiat is on the fourteenth floor of a former Manhattan warehouse overlooking the Hudson River at 25th Street. I would say that I'm meeting him at his office, except that in spite of the fact that there must be thirty thousand square feet on this floor, he really doesn't have one. The whole place, filled with 175 people, working on 175 computers is free form flowing space, designed in the kind of 1950's Flintstones retro style.

Where we're sitting is at one of the round Formica café tables in the 1950s Betty Crocker kitchen area, which is basically the office's canteen. It's extraordinary, filled with a very different kind of excitement from that of the advertising business, more of which later.

Chiat hands me his business card. The firm is called screamingmedia.com and his title is commissar, which is is not the sort you would generally expect from a man who is approaching seventy years old. Nevertheless, there it is.

Chiat was born in the Bronx during the depression and moved when he was in fifth grade to Fort Lee, New Jersey where he completed his upbringing. He has very fond memories of his father, who managed to keep them in reasonably good circumstances in spite of the hard times.

"My dad was an brilliant entrepreneur," he said. "He owned a laundry in Asbury Park, a dry cleaning store in Fort Lee, he had a restaurant concession at the Banner Lodge in Connecticut and another concession running the cafeteria, dining and general store for the waiters and employees for Bill Miller's Riviera on the Palisades.

"He was always looking for new businesses to go into. My fondest memory of him was attending my sister's son's Bar Mitzvah on Long Island and seeing my father sitting off to one side reading The New York Times. He was seventy eight years old at the time. I went over to look over his shoulder. He was reading the business opportunity section."

Chiat went to Rutgers University, earning a BS in education with an English and Social Studies major. He thought he'd become a teacher and immediately after college he taught at New Brunswick High School. He lasted a year.

"The kids were alright," he said, "but I just didn't relate to the other teachers. It's hard to describe, but there didn't seem to be much excitement with it. The teachers life seemed to revolve around the ping pong table in the faculty lounge."

Chiat got married during this time. He met a girl, Anita Varick, while working in the summers at the Banner Lodge in Moodus, Connecticut.

"I was a waiter and she was a dancer. We were very much in love. At the end of the summer she had an offer to go to Las Vegas and she said that she'd either take that offer or we could get married. I decided to marry her. We were married in Brooklyn in 1953 and stayed married for twenty-three years. We had three children together and it was a wonderful time."

Chiat went to Columbia University and he studied broadcasting and got a job upon graduation as a guide at NBC at Rockefeller Center. He worked there for a year. Then, because he had been in ROTC, he was called into the Air Force and was assigned first to Scott Airforce Base in St. Louis and then to Mather Air Force Base in Sacramento, California. He stayed in the service for two years as an air force information officer.

"There were three things going on in Sacramento, California. There was the state government, there were the two air force bases, Mather and McGlennon and there was the Aero Jet General Corporation which made solid and liquid fuel for the rockets that powered the air force space program. What launched the Mercury, Apollo, Saturn and Titan Rockets was made at Aero Jet. When I left the Air Force, I was twenty-four and had two children and was looking for a job. I called Aero Jet. I thought that Aero Jet was in tight with the air force and I was trained in Public Relations. I called them up and said could I talk to public relations?

"The operator said, 'We don't have that, how about industrial relations?' So I said, 'sure.' They hired me as technical recruiter, which meant that I went around the country, interviewing, evaluating and hiring chemical engineers and physicists, things which I knew nothing about. Keep in mind, I was someone who had trouble plugging in an electric razor."

"How did you do it?" I asked.

"Well, I would arrive at a city to interview someone and what I'd do is invite him and his wife out to dinner. I would take particular note about his wife. I figured if she was smart, then he was probably smart too, and I'd hire him. There was a lot of competition for engineers in that field because there was a scarcity of them coming through the colleges. We had a big advertising budget and part of my job to recruit was to spend money on ads. So I got a lot of ad agencies to come to Aero Jet to see me and so it was sort of by mutual agreement, after a year, that I left my job as an industrial engineer recruiter to join the Leland Oliver Company in the Santa Anna Valley. They had a lot of real estate accounts, companies that manufactured measuring devices for industry and for mobile homes manufacturing companies. They hired me as a writer and four years later I was named Creative Director."

For some reason still not clear to Chiat, the principal of the company, Leland Oliver, eased him out. "He said he was bringing in another man and I would have to give up my office, so I went home and spoke to Anita and we imagined me setting up my own agency. What was the worst thing that could happen? Well, I could fail. Would I lose our house? Probably not. I'd then have to get a job. I could do that. I cashed in $4,000 worth of my life insurance and created J. Chiat and Associates, the associates all being free lance and I did the account work and wrote the ads and did the billing, and then hired who I needed for the other services and in this way built a small agency in that area."

Four years later, in 1968, a man called Guy Day, who was the principal of Faust Day, a competitor in the area, called up and asked if they might get together. Chiat was taking one of his sons to a baseball game and invited Day to come and bring his son as well. During that game in 1968, they agreed to merge the two firms. The merger was to last a quarter of a century.

At first it thrived in Los Angeles. Chiat-Day won the Honda account. When they lost it several years later though, Day came into Chiat's office and said he was resigning and maybe the time was right to go off and be a consultant and write a book, and, he did leave.

In the late 1970s though, when Chiat decided he wanted to establish an office in New York City – they were big enough at that point – Day called and joined up again. His name was still on the door. But then a few years after that, he retired again.

"I kept coming to New York," Chiat said, "thinking of it as our satellite office but after a while I began thinking of Los Angeles as the satellite office. New York, as far as ad agencies go, is addictive, at least for me it was. Pretty soon, I decided to just move to New York."

Chiat was divorced by this time. During the next twenty years he was married and divorced twice more. At the present time he lives with Edwina von Gal, who designs landscapes. Chiat feels married, but after three formal tries, is shying from a fourth. It's his own version and Edwina's version of being married.

It was twenty years ago, in 1980, that Chiat bought the property he owns in Sagaponack, two and a half acres, oceanfront.

"It's not far from the Rennert property. You know the Rennert house?" He grinned. "I was in California and I got a call from Michael Kooper, a friend of mine, to say that he was buying a two and a half acre piece from a man named Alan Stillman who had bought about thirty acres and was subdividing it. It was a good hunk of money, but on the phone I told Kooper that if there was another two and a half acres there, he should tell Stillman that I would buy it.

Kooper called back to say that Stillman was finding it hard to believe, that how could he buy it without even seeing it.

"Tell him," Chiat said, "that if Kooper says it's ok for him, then it's ok for me because Kooper is the most conservative man I have ever met and I'll send him a check."

In 1995, Jay Chiat sold Chiat Day, which was billing a billion dollars to Omnicom. It is today known as TBWA Chait/Day. For the next few years, Chiat remained out of the business world.

"I had investments," he said, "mostly in Internet stocks and I was spending a lot time in Sagaponack trying to build my house, James Sachs was the architect. I also got interested in golf; I was one of the charter members at Atlantic Golf Course in Bridgehampton. I'd never played golf before and couldn't believe I'd get addicted to it, but that's what happened, I guess if I like something, I get addicted to it."

I asked Chiat about Screaming Media and noted that it seemed to me that he had assembled 175 young people, giving them 175 computers and sort of turned them loose to see what might happen.

"Oh, we're very focused," he said, "We have one goal. There is, as you know, an overwhelming amount of information on the Internet, so if you go to search for something, you get a lot of extraneous stuff. We build filters that sharpen the focus of what you're looking for. We syndicate content, and then we distribute it to web sites. You join up by subscribing. So, for instance, if you want information about fly fishing, or shopping, or the Hamptons, we can get it to you in a more focused way. It's called arranging information vertically. At the present time, we syndicate content from about three hundred clients including Night Rider and television stations and several others and we distribute to more than 700 web sites. We're a provider of editorial product."

"Are you publicly traded?" I asked.

Chiat smiled, "Not yet," he said.

Chiat tells me about his three children. Debra is married and is living in Italy where she runs a yoga center in Rome. Marc is a film director in Hollywood and has done feature films. Elyse is married and runs an early childhood learning program in Petaluma, California.

"I've spoken to architect Richard Meyer and he's offered to donate his services to design a school." Chiat says proudly. "We're going out next week to look at some property."

The interview ended. We shook hands and I left. Considering the intensity of what I had seen on the fourteenth floor and Chiat's role in it, I kept thinking about his proud description of his father at nearly eighty years old, looking at the business opportunities section of the New York Times and it made me smile. •

review: a chorus line

By Chris Stanley

The Ross School production of A Chorus Line at LTV Studio 3 on May 18, 19, and 20, drew an enthusiastic packed house audience of parents, friends, and theatergoers.

A cast of nineteen talented students, ranging in age from 14-16, delivered skillful, well-coordinated performances under the direction of Anita Sorel, who did a remarkable job of staging the 1975 musical that had been the longest running show on Broadway.

Now, a quarter of a century later, Miichael Bennett's musical about the backstage lives of aspiring dancers, still expresses the depth of passion with which true performers pursue their art.

The professional looking Playbill, artfully designed by Heather Bowen and Julie Iden, gives a historic background of the original dancers who inspired the writing of the characters, which were portrayed so convincingly by Ross School students.

The musical evolves during the selection process of an open casting call in which only six performers will be chosen as part of a Broadway cast. After eliminating a group of contenders, the casting director asks the dancers to talk about themselves as part of the audition process. Bit-by-bit, the audience begins to open a window into the psyche of each of the auditioning dancers as they divest themselves of their affectations, defenses, and reveal their sorrows, weaknesses and passions for their art form.

Cate Beehan, a ballet student since the age of four, sang "The Music and The Mirror" as well as she danced the role of Cassie, who had been lovers with Zach, the director. Cate Beehan's portrayal of Cassie was touchingly sensitive and sincere. Her dancing was not only skillful and well choreographed, but also elegant and professional. Anita Sorel's use of the rotating background mirrors magically highlighted and punctuated Cate Beehan's convincing performance.

Lizzi Bickford as Val, commanded an impressive stage presence as she explained how she reacted against her initial homeliness to become a sassy, sexy dancer and a singer with a clear, strong voice. "They gave me a three for looks and a ten for dancing," Val explained to the audience, in an assertive, matter-of-fact voice.

Hiroki Matsuuchi played the sad Puerto Rican former drag queen with sensitivity and believable reluctance. His skillful acting was convincing when he fell and re-injured his previously injured knee – an injury that leads the director to ask the dancers the inevitable question: "What do you do when you can't dance anymore?"

Kelly Denis is innocent and sweet as Kristine in her nervous forgetfulness. She is refreshingly natural as she sings, "Sing."

Lauren LeBer, as Diana, took the house down when she sang, "Nothing." Her stage presence was natural and arresting as the out-spoken no-nonsense Diana. Her song was rendered excellent musical support from the flawless band.

Bryce Covert, as Connie, told her touching story with honest bravery as she confessed: "Four foot ten – that's the story of my life."

Laurel Gabler was convincingly awkward as Michele, the shy girl from an Italian family, who transformed into a superstar on the stage. Ms. Gabler's transition into a remarkable tap dancer while she sang, "Hello Twelve Dance" in a loud,

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO
"How Important Are Numbers Anyway?"
May 24, 1985

The great achievements of western man have been attributed to many things. It is said it all began when man controlled fire, or when he invented the wheel, or when he learned how to harness animals. Some credit man's success to his oversize brain, or even to his unique, lateral-working thumb. Hardly anything is ever said about the discovery of numbers, however. Yet, until man learned the meaning of numbers and how to use them, all his brains, wheels, fires and thumbs meant exactly zero. Which was the first number.

Consider life without numbers.

A man stands on the street corner, annoyed, standing on one foot, then the other. Finally a woman shows up.

"You're late," the man says. I told you to meet me when the sun got over HERE."

"Oh, I'm sorry," says the woman. "I thought you meant when the sun-got over THERE."

Of course there would be no wristwatches because there would be no way of telling time. Thus there would be no shattering alarm clocks, or news every hour on the hour. TV commercials would just go on for as long as they took rather than for 20 seconds, 30 seconds or one minute.

A more important aspect of living without numbers would be the difficulty of holding organized meetings. People would be showing up at different times (so to speak) and events would just have to wait until everyone was assembled. As a result people would get more used to waiting around, become more relaxed and have fewer ulcers. Life would be more peaceful.

Perhaps a most fascinating scene might take place down at Cape Kennedy, where the space officials would be trying to launch the space Shuttle for orbit around the Earth. No 5-4-3-2-1 countdown here. It would go like this:

"READY?"

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Ulyan

Observations of a New Islander #107
Guide to Men: 101

In last week's paper, Dan Rattiner discussed his lifelong failure to understand women. It occured to me that many women don't understand men well either. I thought I could help. Being the oldest of five with all brothers behind me, I've seen these morons in action and they aren't as complicated as many women think. So based on years of listening and observation, here is my basic guide for getting along with men.

1. Don't ask him how you look. What's the point? They all look like they dressed in the dark.

2. Learn to work the toilet seat: if it's up, put it down. And yes, they do miss the target area when they urinate. No, they don't notice it, and no, it doesn't bother them.

3. Don't ask their opinion of your hairdo, it terrifies them because there is no correct answer.

4. No, he doesn't know what day it is. He never will. He is not interested. You are the only one keeping track of anniversaries, birthdays, etc. Don't send him on repeated quests to find the perfect present. Leave a list of what you want, where he can find it, and when he needs to have it. Tape it to his steering wheel.

5. Don't ask what you don't want to know. Period.

6. Don't ask him what he's thinking about unless you are prepared to discuss banal topics such as player trades, Hail Mary plays and where to buy new tires.

7. They don't like cats. Your cat is not different than any other feline.

8. Don't take them shopping. They'd rather have a root canal. They cannot comprehend how looking at seventy china patterns is a form of meditation. When we look at china, we see art, we see a beautifully set table, a happy time with family, they only see dishes. If you ask a man why he bought a particular shirt, he will tell you because it was the closest to the door.

9. Crying is the most effective form of blackmail. Use it wisely.

10. Ask for exactly what you want and specify when you want it. Subtle hints NEVER work. If you say the room feels dark, they'll put in a brighter bulb. Just tell them you want the room painted light lavender – and give them the paint sample – by June 20 when your mother comes to visit.

11. Yes and No are perfectly acceptable answers to men. Start out by answering them yes or no. If they want to know why, they'll ask. They do not have the attention span to follow feminine logic. Example: I was visiting a friend and her husband and I mentioned I was charged $84 to change a headlight. Her husband said I was robbed. I turned to her and lamented, "I should have worn my wedding ring." She understood immediately. He had a completely bewildered look on his face, he just couldn't connect a headlight to a wedding ring.

12. Never say no to sex. Even if you're exhausted and all you can do is offer to remain conscious, they'll be grateful and you can parlay that into elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't quite understand how my late husband pulled me out of a truly bad situation the other night. It would seem impossible that in a time of need and frustration that Ken could have come through but he did and here's the story.

I had the great pleasure of meeting Richard and Betty Schlein for dinner at red|bar in Southampton. This was a rain check dinner. We had a failed attempt to get together a few weeks ago. The dinner was wonderful and the company stimulating. Betty is full of interesting information. I have real affection for Richard. The dinner was great and great fun.

After dinner I stopped to say hello to a friend who used to work at Dan's Papers. She was sitting at the bar where she was about to have dinner. She had moved away but her love for the Hamptons brought her back. It was raining. Finally I made my way to my car and went to unlock it. I put my key in the door and much to my surprise the key broke off in the lock. I was able to remove it and dumbly stood looking at the two pieces in my hand.

About a year ago I signed up for emergency road service with a company called Cars. I had never called them for service but I have been paying for the "insurance." Although my computer and pocketbook were locked in the car, I had my wallet with me and it contained the card with the emergency number on it. The owner of the restaurant was nice enough to let me use the phone and I reached a very personable man named John when I called. John checked my member number and told me he thought he could help. He had no idea how far Southampton is from their closest locksmith or tow facility.

On a Thursday night in the Hamptons finding easy help seemed unlikely, especially pre-Memorial Day. I was not very optimistic. I felt bad about tying up the phone and told John to see what he could do and to call me back at the restaurant.

People are nice. My friend at the bar offered me a ride home. The bartender was trying to come

County Parks Waive Entrance Fee to Vets On Memorial Weekend

Suffolk County Executive Robert Gaffney has signed a bill that will exempt military veterans from paying the entrance fee at Suffolk County parks every Memorial Day weekend starting May 26, 2000. The bill was approved unanimously by the County legislature. Gaffney said, "Suffolk County's park system represents some of the best of what our veterans fought to protect. On the weekend set aside to honor them, it is only fitting that they should be able to enjoy our open spaces freely."

This year the waiver is effective Friday, May 26 through Monday, May 29. It applies to all Suffolk County parks that charge entrance fees. It does not extend to greens fees at county golf courses. Veterans must show their Veterans Administration ID card and proof of Suffolk County residency to qualify.

East Hampton Shuttle Offers Reward Program

Hampton Jitney, in cooperation with area merchants and the Village of East Hampton, has organized a promotion program to encourage ridership on this summer's "Lumber Lane Parking Shuttle."

The program will reward those who regularly ride the shuttle by offering free gifts or discounts on purchases at several local businesses. Riders will be given a "Shuttle Rewards" card to be validated every time they use the shuttle. The card will be stamped every time a passenger travels, with ten trips recorded on each card. Gifts or discounts will be offered in multiples of ten trips at a number of local stores.

In addition, the person who uses the shuttle the most over the summer will be given a free overnight trip for two to Atlantic City as well.

Shelter Island Murder: Self Defense?

In the Riverhead trial concerning the only recorded murder in Shelter Island's history, defendant Kenneth Payne's attorney, Steven Wilutis said to the court that Payne's fatal shooting two years ago of Curtis Cook was a desparate measure to protect himself, his girlfriend and his daughter from a man Payne had ample reason to believe was a sexual criminal.

Cook had recently been charged with sodomizing an eight year old girl. "Kenneth Payne believed the threat was imminent and immediate," said Wilutis.

Payne went to Cook's nearby residence, knocked on the door, and when Curtis opned it, Payne shot him.

15. To men, anything they said more than six months ago is inadmissible in an argument. All stupid comments become null and void after seven days. They have no appreciation for the dedication it takes to keep a mental record of all their mistakes.

16. They all think they deserve a Victoria's Secret model. Every pencil-necked geek, pot-bellied, ugly, cue-ball covering guy thinks a Miss November is somewhere out there waiting for him. If a woman had a man's ego, she could rule the world.

up with a solution and all I could think of were my obligations for Friday morning and that I couldn't abandon my computer and other possessions locked in my car. I was on the verge of tears (as if that would help anything). In my moment of despair my husband's voice came into my ear. "Honey, if you ever get into trouble, I'm hiding a spare key under the car."

Was it this car? Am I imagining that he said that? Is this just wishful thinking? I had to go back out into the rain to find out. Much to my surprise, the key was right where he said it would be in a Velcro bag. He saved me.

I went back into the restaurant to find that John from Cars was on the phone. He had bad news. He could get a tow truck to me but it would take about three hours and still I would need a locksmith. The car was left in gear. Towing it would be a problem. Thank God for my husband's superior intelligence and planning. I called out, "Ken, I love you! Thank you!" The bartender laughed. His name is Ken.

Peaceful and content, I finally drove home. I called my stepson. "Your father is the best person I know." He agreed although somehow I got my tenses messed up.

Ken died almost three years ago and still he came through for me in my moment of need. Now I need to get spare keys made for all my vehicles. The lesson was learned and the dues were minimal. Thank God and Ken. At the moment they are one and the same.

head down so they can see the score.

26. They CANNOT ask for directions. If they do, their brain will implode.

27. Telling them that the models in the men's magazines are airbrushed is not going to deter them from looking and comparing them to you. I recommend you keep a couple of big zucchini in the fridge. When you've heard enough about the models, pull out a zucchini, drop it on the counter with a heavy thud, make eye contact and say nothing.

28. The relationship is never going to be like it was the first three months you were going out. They had to go through that sensitivity hell and listen to female drivel to get an emotional lock on you. Once they know you're in love with them, they can relax.

29. No, they can't hear the baby cry. They don't know a hungry cry from a wet diaper or tired cry. They think we're making the whole thing up to make them look inept... like they need help with that.

30. Remember they can handle anything but your silence. A woman's silence is worth a thousand words.

31. Speak with your eyes. Any message sent arrives ten times faster when sent by ocular messenger.

32. Here's a list of what men understand about women:

33. Let them have the first hour after they get home from work to themselves. They need time to emotionally gird their loins for an evening of listening to us and referee-ing children.

34. Don't rub the lamp unless you want the genie to come out.

35. Lastly, remember the words of Mae West which are still true today, "A man in the house is worth two in the street." •

"Well, for those of you who are staying." I said, "and I understand some of you are, it's nighttime now and I'll see you in the morning. We'll make you breakfast."

I started up the stairs and then stopped.

"I'm gonna get every pillow and blanket I can find and throw them down to you," I said.

And so I did. The kids whooped and hollered as something plunked down and they could grab it and pass it around.

The security guards were about to leave.

"You guys did a great job," I said.

"We did our best. But, we couldn't be everywhere. Sorry about the fight out on the street. We probably could have used one more guy."

"I'll tell that to Cathie." I said. "Right now she's upstairs asleep."

"Well you better have a talk with her." He said. "This was a serious business."

"I know." I said.

"She thinks it's kind of Disneyland or like when she was a girl."

"I figured it was about two out of three, we'd make it and I was very worried."

"Well, we did." The security guard said. Then he and his friend got in his car and drove off.

The next morning at nine o'clock, I got up and surveyed the damage. There really wasn't much. There were cigarette butts outside everywhere, I guess that was inevitable since we don't have ashtrays anywhere.

So that's the story. The organized clean up took about forty-five minutes with each kid pitching in. There was Mike and Geo, Seth, Marak and Gabe. I went down to the deli and got egg sandwiches. Coming back from the deli I had seen that our neighbor next door had a bunch of empty beer cans and what looked to me like a cardboard six-pack case of Budweiser on his front lawn. This was the obvious effluvia from of the limousines that had parked down the street.

When I got back to the house I asked if one of the kids would take a garbage bag over there and pick up what he could find. He returned fifteen minutes later, a six-pack under his arm, the garbage bag with the effluvia in it in the other. He held the six pack out to me. "This is an unopened pack of Budweiser." He said. "What do I do with it?"

"I'll take care of it." I said. "Did you see the owner of the house while you were cleaning up?" I asked.

"Yeah, he was right there." he said.

"Was he mad?" I asked.

"Oh no, not at all. I said, sorry about the mess and he said, hey, that's OK. You're only young once."

* * *

At about 11 a.m. I went down to Hampton Bagels to pick up stuff for brunch. Artist Kurt Hoppe was coming by the house with some guests. The house would be cleaned up and put back together by the time they arrived or so I hoped. I was standing in line as you do in the bagel place when a woman looked at me and smiled. "How did it go?" She asked.

"Which kid was yours?" I asked.

"Michael Tibbits." She said.

"Oh it was great. They had a wonderful time," I said.

"How many were there?" She asked.

"Around 200." I said. "And you know what? I think around 190 of the 200 are terrific kids and then there were ten we had to deal with."

"I think that's about the right percentage," she said. •

take more than two hours to so to get to LaGuardia, but then it was late Sunday and you had all that westward traffic, and there was the fact that I had never driven to LaGuadia before (the boss gave me intricate directions) – and then there was a little trouble with the car.

"To get the AC on," the boss said (I just realized I don't remember his name) you turn the key just slightly to the right, then back...."

Now it was a June day and it was hot and I've got the model in the car, some skinny blonde, and right in the middle of East Hampton I try to get the air conditioning on and I turn the key just a bit to the right and the car stalls and it doesn't turn back on right away,

The model freaks out. "I've got to catch that plane! I've got a shoot in Montreal tomorrow morning!" She jumps out of the car and races into a store to make a phone call. (This was in the not so long ago days when everyone did not have a cell phone.) In another instant she's back out, I've got the car running. She says, "Call your boss, we've got to get another car."

It just went downhill from there. When I stopped short in Brdigehampton she curtly said to me, "Can't you drive?" We met the boss in Southampton, he took a look at the car, told my passenger all the other cars were out, she gave him hell and we proceeded westward, the model taking out her anger on me. We were already running late.

Diplomatically I said, "If you had to catch an eight o'c.ock plane on Sunday you should have asked us to pick you up earlier."

"I was working today," she snapped. "I had a shoot in East Hampton."

I shut up. When we turned onto County Road 111 to go up to the Expressway there was an accident there and it took us half an hour to go four miles. When we hit Nassau County the traffic was awful. We crawled along. The model, whom I was loathing at this point, said she was going to sue the company if she missed her plane. I wanted her to catch the plane, too: I had the terrible fear that I would have to drive her back to the Hamptons. I made up my mind then and there if that happened I would give her money out of my own pocket to have her take another taxi. She was so abusive that if it were my cab I would have stopped it and asked her to get out.

As we inched across the Queens line, though, her anger and general nastiness seemed to abate a bit. "I know it's not your fault," she said. I was certainly glad she had had this revelation – though I still had the same horror when we got to LaGuardia (I had followed the directions to a T and made all the right turns) and the plane had departed. Fortunately the airline was arranging for the model to stay at a hotel at the airport. She would be catching another plane in the morning. Though she still might have to sue the company, she said.

Just relieved to get back into the car and not have her return with me, I left LaGuadia. It must have been nine by now, the long June day finally fallen into darkness. But if I thought my travail for the day had ended, it was about to take on another phase. I had found LaGuardia easily enough, but somehow I couldn't get back out eastward to the island . Every time I was on a road, highway, parkway, whatever, that had a sign ahead that said Eastern Long Island, that turnoff was on the opposite side of the road and I could not get across two or three lanes of traffic in time to get off. This happened three times. The third time I literally screamed out loud. I wound up driving back and forth between LaGuardia and Kennedy three times. Finally, desperately, I cut across two lanes, hoping I wouldn't be hit, when I saw the sign for eastern LI come up again. And this time I made it.

I t was about eleven thirty when I got back home. That was it, I decided, I'm never driving another idiot around. Though a few days later I put it to the owner more diplomatically, "I guess this job isn't for me."

"We were kind of reaching the same conclusion," he said.

I left because of the people, because I thought there was a good chance I would be in a real accident before the end of summer and because, when I figured out the hours, wages, and tips, I wasn't even pulling in eight dollars an hour.

The experience left me with a sympathy – and pity – for taxi drivers, and no lessening in my promise to never take a similar job. At any rate, the next time you get into a taxi, whether it's New York or the Hamptons, give a little thought to the hapless wretch behind the wheel. • clear voice was smooth and convincing. Her performance was well coordinated and flawless.

Annie Alfstad, an accomplished dancer with a beautiful ring to her voice, had a charming stage presence as she portrayed Maggie, the sweetheart of the group.

Alison Kantrowich played the role of Sheila with appropriate attitude and noticeable ballet skills. Her acting ability was revealed when the director said, "Sheila, don't perform – just talk." When Sheila let go of her affectation, Ms. Kantrowich showed her character's vulnerability and humanity.

Constance Sepulveda-Manias in her portrayal of Bebe displayed skillful dancing ability. Her harmonious voice blended in with musicality in the song, "At The Ballet."

Alison Rudansky was subtle and sadly humorous as Rikki, the "middle-class wasp who started breaking into people's houses to rearrange their furniture – suicide in Missouri."

Lari, the casting director's choreographer, was portrayed by Carla Spooner with professional discipline. One could easily forget that she was acting.

Keith Skretch gave an impressively strong performance as Zach, the director. Mr. Skretch was both decisive and compassionate and his transitions were smooth and motivated. He appeared to be living the role rather than acting it.

Musical director, Rosemary Reynolds-Sundet, with the help of six articulate musicians supported performances with musical sensitivity and great clarity – especially Ellen Johansen on the piano and Mitchell Sundet on trumpet.

The revolving backdrop mirrors, which were created by director Anita Sorel and Richard Keys, gave the stage a life and rhythmic magic of its own. Lighting by Archie Wilson set an atmospheric mood.

Sparkling top hats and white tails by Linda Shugrue and Anne Longley successfully mimicked the final scene costumes in the original production, punctuating the Ross School production with a touch of Broadway pizzazz.

Ms. Sorel will be starting the next school year with a production of original plays written by the students and directed by novice directors. •

"Ok. Everybody move back. We're going to light the rocket."

"Ready in the control tower?"

"Ready."

"Ok; ready in the Shuttle?"

"Roger."

"Ok. Almost ready. We'll be ready any time now. Ready to cut the ship free?"

"Righto."

"Ok, everybody set, ready, here we go when I say go. Ready, Set, Go. NOW. No, no, no."

But all this will never happen. I only have to go a few inches to see how numbers have completely dominated my existence. On my desk at this moment is a spray can called "6-12 Insect Repellent" and a squeeze can called "3 in 1 Household Oil," which I use to oil my typewriter. There is a roll of scotch tape made by the "3M Company" which says" 1/2 700 inches, Catalogue number 119, $.59 plus tax." And I myself am number 143-30-2107 to the Social Security people, and worse, to the State of New York Department of Motor Vehicles, I am number ROl 734-2925-695341.

that preserves the environment. Although several Bridgehampton CAC members claim that they would not use the bicycle path, there are many other Bridgehampton residents who say they would.

I suppose we'll have to stand back and watch the different interests slug it out while outsiders interpret our machinations as just the way we do things around here. For those interested in joining in the fray, the Town Board's Public hearing is scheduled for Monday, June 5th, at 1pm in Town Hall. Both CAC Committees plan to be present, and there's always room for one more plebian opinion. To wait ten years for the bicycle project to appear on the page, in a community consumed with consuming and building and exclusivity, seems a bit overdue but in the present climate should be considered an act of optimism. The person responsible for securing the grant last year was U.S. Representative Michael Forbes. Thanks to him, after all this time, the bike path is actually, finally being discussed and considered. Presumably, a bicycle path would mean that anyone could use it. Would creating the bicycle path be perceived as one more symbol that the democratization/homogenization of the Hamptons had indeed begun? Between that, the new Starbucks in Brigehampton, the abundance of Tara-like houses packed one upon the other like sardines, and the disappearing potato fields some might ask, was it time to pack our bags? But then everyone, sooner or later, responds with a resounding, "and go where exactly?" • of the internet and the dot com generation. Our dot com stock market Nasdaq, has gone up and up at rates never seen before. It's a whole new world. And it was at a speech given by Greenspan six months ago when he said the Nasdaq was going up too fast, that I realized this man has a problem.

Greenspan wouldn't know a new and permanent state of prosperity if he stumbled over it. For him, everything goes up and then it goes back down. Things that go up and up are a problem.

Get with the program, Greenspan. Our new economy requires less energy – less heavy industry, more communication but with less wires, less transportation and roads, fewer office buildings (you can work at home) and more micro-automation than ever before. The situation from 1988 on compares more closely to 1888 and the invention – in quick order – of the electric light, telephone, car, radio, airplane and telegraph boosting our way of life PERMANENTLY. We are no longer in the cyclical mode of of 1948 to 1988.

Greenspan, if he can't get with it, should resign. We recommend some young person – Pee Wee Herman comes to mind – as his replacement. •

Commencement at Southampton College of LIU

The Commencement at Long Island University's Southampton Campus was a little drizzly & cold this past Sunday, but nothing could stop the warmth and charm of the gathering. Billy Joel not only received an honorary degree but was also a great speaker. An added treat was a song including words about Southampton College & Route 27 (with crowd participating); the audience rocked. Robert F.X. East End Open to Benefit East End Hospice

The Kick-off Party for the upcoming East End Open (July 8) to benefit the East End Hospice was held last Saturday at Casa Basso in Westhampton Beach. The miserable weekend weather suggested a light turnout but this was far from the case. The tables were sold out and last-minuters made it an SRO event. So some of the committee gave up their seats for dinner and watched from the bar area. EEO partygoers did the pre-dinner cocktail hour schmooze then had dinner, dancing and entertainment from a group calle "the lost souls." Then there was a fashion show of creations by Hamptonite Ron Sabella with the models from regulars of the East End Open tennis event. But with these ladies including Romana Grant and Marsha Altman done up and wearing sexy gowns and struttting their stuff, the sounds of cat-calls and whistles filled the room.

Rendering the North Fork in Exquisite Detail

By Loraine Page

Steve Berger is such a right-brained thinker he says he sometimes has trouble getting dressed by himself. Berger puts his prodigious creativity to use when he picks up his Deardorff camera and heads out to capture scenes on black and white film.

His photographs, which he prints himself, have been described as breathtaking. He's a fan of the large-format camera because it enables him to record texture in painstaking detail. And texture, whether it is old paint peeling off the side of a barn or the velvet petals of a flower, is what turns him on, as it did Ansel Adams, whom he admires.

"Texture just makes me crazy," said Berger recently as he sorted through hundreds of prints from his portfolio, which he keeps in the studio attached to his two-story home in Jamesport. He picked up one of his seascapes and said, "If Ansel were here and saw this scene, he would have said, 'Holy sh-t, look at that.'"

In fact, Berger's eye resembles Adams'. He's on a never-ending quest for the perfect shot and finds most of them on the scenic North Fork. He drives around and makes notes to himself when he sees an exciting prospect. Sometimes a very complicated scene catches his eye, and sometimes a very simple one does.

His "All Roads Lead Somewhere," taken on Peconic Bay Boulevard in August of 1998, is an example of the former. A dirt road with farm fields on either side formed strong lines — lots of them — that drew Berger's eye to an historic schoolhouse located in the far distance. This was a shot where "everything was interesting all the way back," he said.

In contrast, the subject of "Chick's Farm Stand In Repose" is simply big empty wire spools where the owner kept fruits and vegetables on display during the summer months. Berger took this shot on Sound Avenue last year at the close of the season. "It became Chick's Farm 'in repose' because everything went away for the winter," he explained.

Another simple yet effective shot is of a pole sticking up from the sand in a seascape taken at Montauk Point. Berger likes to go to popular landmarks and shoot them from a different perspective. "I figure there are enough postcards of the lighthouse," he said.

Berger, a retired president of a large communications company in the midwest, is giving full vent to his zany side these days. He titled one photograph "Stool Sample" and sent it off to an out-of-state gastroenterologist as a gift. It's a shot of a wooden stool outside, with a puddle of rain on top containing dead leaves and a bird feather.

Joining him in zaniness is wife Ellen Berger, also a retired corporate president. A talented craftswoman among many other talents, Ellen has a special fondness for cats. The Bergers have 11 of them roaming the house when they're not in their special room equipped with cat refrigerator, cat perch, cat food, and kitty litter. One cat is black and white — Berger couldn't resist naming him Ansel.

Though Berger takes his photography seriously — he learned it when he was apprenticed to a commercial photographer in his teens — he doesn't feel compelled to work at it every day. The equipment comes out when the conditions are right, such as newly fallen snow or mile-high clouds.

"The skies out here are incredible," he said as he pointed to a photograph on the wall of his living room. Titled "The Sound After a Storm," Berger recorded this scene on Pier Avenue in Northville last August. "The storm had cleared," explained Berger, "but look at the various tones of the water and the clouds. And this bird fortuitously flew in. Some of it is luck."

Berger is aware of the element of timing. As a reminder of its illusive nature, he keeps a photograph he took of a neighbor's dock on the wall of the office he shares with Ellen. (This is his "Inspiration Wall," which is adorned with prints of photographers he admires plus one original photograph of Ansel Adams' titled "Moonrise Over Hernandez, New Mexico," 1948.) The curling paint on this dock attracted him. He took one shot and for the next three months ruminated on how to capture the curling paint from different angles. While he ruminated, the dock received a fresh coat of paint.

The neighbor's dock notwithstanding, Berger has been able to amass an enchanting collection of photographs of Eastern Long Island, which he sells at crafts festivals and are available for purchase at Cecily's Love Lane

IN TASTING, L.I. WINES HOLD OWN VS. FRENCH

BY RICHARD J. SCHOLEM

"Either prestigious French wines are wildly overpriced, Long Island wines are the buy of the ages or both. At least those were the conclusions that resulted from a recent blind tasting of Lenz Long Island wines and high-flying French headliners like Chateau Pétrus 1992, '93 and '94, J. Drouhin, Montrachet Marquis de Laguiche 1994, '95 and '96, Veuve Clicquot Gold 1989 and La Grande Dame 1988 and '89."

"And how do Lenz wines that cost from $10 to $30 stack up in head-to-head competition with French superstars? They equal or surpass them."

Insight into War...

By Karen Lund

The Union and Confederate soldiers were determined to be victorious in capturing the hearts and minds of the school children who visited the Hallockville Museum Farm in Riverhead on Friday, May 19, 2000. There were thirty soldiers who were reenactors in a Civil War and 700 school children with their teachers from Suffolk and Nassau counties. The soldiers were clearly outnumbered but they felt that they would be able to interest and challenge their young visitors by answering question and engaging them in hands-on experiences.

The children rotated through three experiences at the encampment. While visiting the Union and Confederate camps, soldiers spoke about their daily lives while waiting to engage in battle and how it feels to be away from home. Civilians also shared their experiences and thoughts, relating how it feels to be displaced from your home when it is taken over by an army. While giving the children an historical point of view, the soldiers shared provisions, such as beef jerky and hard tack, and encouraged them to handle the equipment, including their knapsacks and cooking utensils.

Dr. John Eilertsen, the Executive Director of the Hallockville Museum Farm and Folklife Center, hoped the children would be entertained and excited by these experiences. Most of all, he wanted the children to walk away with a sense that the war was made up of individuals whose lives would never be the same again, and who suffered by either serving in the military or loosing a home or a loved one. "Hopefully," Dr. Eilertson explained, "the children will gain insight into a terrible war." His objective is to help children see historical events through a humanistic viewpoint.

Private Mike Ciaravino's objective is to help children and adults understand the past so that in the future, conflicts like our Civil War, could be averted. Also, he feels that we must understand our own history first before trying to make sense of the rest of the world. He was amazed at the attention and interest displayed by the children as they touched the guns and other equipment. His enthusiasm must have been contagious, as he passionately described the history of this regiment.

Private Ciaravino and his compatriot, Private Rich Schiavo, are members of the 14th Brooklyn Regiment, New York State Militia, Company H. This regiment was formed in 1847 as a New York State Militia and in 1861, represented the City of Brooklyn in the Civil War, as it sent 1000 men off to war. This well-known unit served between 1861-1864, engaging in 28 major campaigns. This was the only Northern unit to fight in the Battle of Gettysburg from July 1 to July 3, 1863, As a result of their heroism and service, there are three monuments dedicated to their regiment, the Railroad Cut, McPherson's Ridge and Culp's Hill.

The regiment was told to hold Culp's Hill at all costs until the Union Army could regroup and march back into town. The regiment did just that. Also, for a short time, members of the regiment acted as President Lincoln's body guards. At the Battle of Bull Run, the regiment, as it fought valiantly, was given its first nickname by an exasperated Confederate general, Stonewall Jackson. Private Ciaravino proudly declared that he is one of "those damned red-legged devils". After the war was over in 1864, only 166 out of 1000 men survived. This regiment has been serving our country right up through the Desert Storm conflict.

Both Eilertsen and Ciaravino hope that if children can gain an understanding of our history, the potential for conflicts like our civil war will be lessened. Also, if our children can empathize with soldiers, either Union of Confederate, they will understand that history is made-up of individuals, who had families, hopes, dreams and fears just like them. Then this empathy could be a foundation for settling conflict without resorting to violence.

A Balance of Old Standards and New Varieties

By Pamela Gibson

Spring has burst into full bloom. In fact, many vintners and farmers on the North Fork are saying that they rarely have seen a more spectacular bud break. So with this in mind, it is time to fill in those bare spots in our perennial borders, plant and refresh our herb gardens, fill the rows with vegetables, and brighten up the borders with annuals. There could not be a better place to start than The Peconic River Herb Farm, just mile north of exit 71 of the LIE, then left on River Road, follow signs on the left, through the rooster crowned posts.

Chris Spindler, the founder and owner of The Peconic River Herb Farm moved into the fourteen acre farm twenty years ago, spending the last fourteen years improving and operating the spectacular nursery. She is quick to point out that her husband, a helicopter pilot for the Suffolk County Police, her two now teenage sons, and her ~~eight~~ employees have all greatly contributed to the character and beauty of the farm.

We started the tour at a small greenhouse and potting shed, the first garden structure. Chris explained that originally she just wanted to grow plants that she "found intriguing," but as the greenhouse filled to bursting, she started to sell a few favorites. Now, in addition to the sizable nursery, there are fourteen acres of spectacular demonstration gardens, a tea garden that local clubs use in the summer for meetings, and classes for everything from trellis building to wreath making, all on the shores of the beautiful Peconic River. Proceeding to the herb garden, there are available no less than seventeen different lavenders, eight different rosemarys, seven different oreganos, and twelve various thymes. There are herbs for medicinal uses, organic pest control, and of course flavoring and scenting. The adjacent vegetable garden offers thirty-one pepper varieties, and thirty-six tomato choices, and certainly more other vegetables than most people are familiar with. I found the choices overwhelming, but the very knowledgeable staff was eager to help me make the right choices, a balance of "good old standards, and a few interesting new varieties."

The Perennial Garden, in addition to being beautiful, presents many rare plants not found in other nurseries. One of the specialties is Clematis, and I saw several spectacular examples. There is a Fern Garden, Cutting Garden, Rose Garden, Aquatic Plant Garden, complete with a gorgeous large planted pond, a large barn shop with an assortment of dried herbs, flowers, essential oils, and all sorts of garden structures, birdhouses, and ornamentation.

Be sure to ask for Rosemary, the gardener, not the plant. She has worked at the farm for eight years, and creates the most beautiful container gardens in the different baskets and pots available at the Peconic Herb Farm. The hundreds of container choices are unlike those found elsewhere, they are original and uniquely suited to an East End Country look, many planted to demonstrate great color combinations. This is certainly a terrific place to visit for fresh ideas, or to just start or revive your own creative process.

This year classes at The Peconic Herb Farm go well beyond the usual wreath making to include creating Perennial Gardens, Herb Gardens, Mediterannean Gardens, Fern and Moss Gardens, to name a very few. The classes, which include all the plants needed to build the garden once you get home, are usually sold out, so check out the web site HYPERLINK http://www.prherbfarm.com or call the farm at 631-369-0058 for the schedule, and reserve your seat early. The Peconic Herb Farm will host the 11th Annual Herb Fest 2000 on September 23, but don't wait until then to treat yourself to this delight.

Gallery in Mattituck. He was the only photographer to take honorable mention in this year's Guild Hall Member's Exhibit, he won two first place prizes at last year's Riverhead Library photo competition, and he won an honorable mention in the annual Greenport poster competition.

Berger enjoys fishing, woodworking, reading, corresponding with friends via e-mail, talking to the friendly townspeople in Jamesport, and much more. He and his wife, both in their 50s, are making the most of the early retirement they were fortunate enough to secure. Berger is in the process of writing down his thoughts on how to make the transition from work life to leisure. From his work-in-progress:

"A friend of mine related a story about a mutual acquaintance who recently turned down a gazillion dollars for his company. When asked why and how he was able to resist the offer, he said, 'I don't want to be another one of those rich guys with nothing to do.' To me, this fellow has not developed an inner life. Forget that 'Get a hobby' is a cliche — and get one."

For Berger, there is no other hobby that can fulfill his need to create as photography can. He is a master printer (like Ansel Adams was) and takes as much pride in the developing of his photographs as in the taking of them.

When asked how he would succinctly describe his photographs, Berger answers with a dry witticism. "I'd like to think they're all... in focus.

If they're in focus, I'm in focus."

DAN TRAVELS

Here and There

By Eunice Juckett-Meeker

Twice a year the purely local East Hampton group calling itself The Lost Tribe of Acabonac meets and roasts/toasts an outstanding resident. In fact, a few years back I was a speaker when this group made my college roommate, Mary Louise Edwards Dodge, their princess. It didn't occur to me then that I'd ever be an honoree – but this happened to me May 5 at the Springs Firehouse.

Because this meeting is a form of local celebration, I felt truly honored to be named the Tribe's first honoree of the Second Century.

Thanks to Town Crier, Hugh King, telling-all about my past – growing up on a dairy farm and never learning to milk a cow, attending the EHHS, then Russell Sage College, returning to teach here for twenty-six years and getting involved with the LVIS and AAUW – my life on LI was pretty well exposed. Now, in my regular column I'm going to reveal a few of the unusual things that happened to me in my "other life." In fact I'll touch briefly on such places as Cuba, Korea, East Berlin and even far-off Afghanistan.

Although I'm continuing teaching, – from which I retired more than thirty years ago – I'm once again helping English as a Second Language HS students from Ecuador, Peru, Costa Rica and Guatemala in the philosophy and techniques of effective writing. My class starts at 7:30 a.m. and it's working well. I hope these ambitious students, 14-17 will be able to pass the State Regents English exam in June. I'm using techniques and discussions I developed when I was teaching college-bound Freshman in the Forties, Fifties and Sixties. These techniques still work.

I began getting my travel articles published in 1948 – in the Paris Herald Tribune. My love for travel is due, I think, to my grandfather reading to me from the National Geographic, and my doctor uncle starting me collecting stamps.

Grandfather and Uncle Will must have been in cahoots – Gramps had me locate the origin of each stamp on the globe. Thus I discovered the many new and strange areas, near and far, and I became "hooked on travel." "Someday," I vowed, "I'm going there." The "write about it" approach came later.

Thus began my two lives, as a teacher in East Hampton, and as a writer of travel and other features.

My first Here and There column for Dan's Papers began last fall with a piece on the St. Lawrence islands in Quebec. I've written over twenty of them to date and more are in the think tank. Dan's requirement that I link the place about which I'd be writing with Long Island seemed at first like a big hurdle. Now I find these links, although a challenge, come easily, and unexpectedly.

I'm still traveling. Last month I visited Bermuda, Washington, DC and Texas, and next month I go to Chicago, Northern California, Vermont, and maybe the

Delmarva – a quirk of nature uniting Delaware, Maryland and Virginia between Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic. It's a lovely place where both James Michener and I have found much to write about. My husband, John, and I shared a dining room table with the Micheners on a rough Atlantic crossing a few years back. on the QE2, and guess what we discussed – eastern Long Island as a setting for travel writing.

I've now been to over 100 countries, Cuba several times, both before and during Castro.

As nearly as I can recall, the last trip was about twenty years ago. Several journalists and some Washington big shots were invited to meet with a similar group of Russians. I was seat-mated with the head of the Interstate Commerce Committee. He showed me a few tricks for getting around Castro's strict travel restrictions in Havana. Thus I got to talk with some older Cubans and to ask questions about Cuban life both in Havana and in the countryside.

My report appeared in Travel Agent Magazine. My most vivid memory, though is of the jammed tiny room not airconditioned, where we waited three hours for Castro to fly in from a secret trip to Mexico. We weren't impressed even though we got to see the dictator up close. I suppose we visualized him boasting "See how close to the US I am, even inviting their officials and press here."

Another international adventure came in post World War II. My husband and I, on a trip to Holland, participated in a Meet the Dutch program. After a lovely dinner we were talking about teaching in Holland and in America when their three children dashed in. They'd been watching on their tiny TV the building of the new Berlin Wall and thought we'd be interested.

Several years later I was in West Berlin and a small group was selected to move through Check Point Charlie into East Berlin..

It was a grim, scary experience. Very few people on the streets, boarded up shops, and those that were opened had almost no items in their windows. People hurried by without speaking. We were all glad to move back through the checkpoint into a much busier, even active West Berlin, although a few of the bombed buildings, including a church had been left as monuments from World War II.

My next unusual international experience began with sharing a flight to Korea from NYC via Alaska with Dan Rather and his camera crew following the fatal shooting down of a plane similar to ours a few days earlier. I was photographed drinking coffee with Dan – purely a camera exercise. I don't drink coffee normally. Same for tea, which I once drank for a tea with Helen Hayes, in Mexico No drinks were involved when I once got to talk, briefly, with Nixon and Eisenhower, Nixon at the EH Airport, and Eisenhower at West Point.

Our Korean press group was invited to go north to the border with North Korea – where small grandstands were erected perhaps 200' apart each side of the barricaded border. Through binoculars we watched the North Koreans - as they were watching us. A few shouts, but no actual communication so we got no quotes, only impressions – none very favorable.

I saved the most unusual travel experience for the last, for it is the basis for a book about of my travel adventures I've just started writing. The title for the book my friends have been telling me I should write I'm calling*One Foot in Afghanistan*..

Several years ago I was part of a group invited to take a delivery flight for one of Boeing's new jets . We left from Seattle. Our route was over the North Pole to Pakistan. I was traveling with my former editor, Paul Friedlander of the NY Times Travel Section.

Paul and I, and a young writer from California had gone through the Khyber Pass on our way to Kabul, the capital of this little-known Asiatic country. After a strange roadside lunch of crusty bread with goat cheese – and Coca Cola, we expected to cross into Afghanistan. But the Pakistan border with Afghanistan was closed. The Russians had invaded that morning

I noticed the guard spoke English and so I pleaded with him. "We've come all the way from America and were counting on seeing your most unusual country." He looked us over, shook his head and then said, "Put one foot in. I won't tell."

My right foot got the honor, and thus it has been where the rest of me hasn't.

Shop'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

Well here it is, Memorial Day Weekend and the season officially begins for everyone. My shopping will get a little harder with the traffic jams, but that's OK, like Dunkin' Donuts, it's worth the trip. So let's do some shopping!

Starting out in Westhampton Beach this week, I was in complete shock when I entered the world of Shock on Main Street. Elyse has done it again! This Memorial Day weekend there are two new grand openings on Main Street. Elyse has opened Shock Kids and Shock Babies at. 99 Main Street. The demand for a baby Shock store was so overwhelming and is opening just in time for the arrival of Elyse and Jamie's baby which is due the first week in June. With the opening of Shock Kids/Baby Shock, Elyse and Jamie thought what better way to complete the baby store but to open a real old-fashioned homemade ice cream parlor right down the alleyway behind Shock Kids. WHB Homemade Ice Cream Factory will be featuring homemade ice cream, coffees, deserts and sweets. So stop by and celebrate these two new additions with them this Saturday, May 27, from 2 to 4 p.m. There will be clowns, balloons, and face painting at the new shock and at the new ice cream parlor. See you there!

By the way, looking for super cool, super pool help? Ocean Spray Pools and Spas on Old Riverhead Road in Westhampton Beach have all the solutions for you. Their American made, Euro designed are made of reinforced membrane and rust resistant, lightweight, powder-coated galvanized steel supports. In ground quality at above ground prices, available in a variety of shapes and sizes. Hey, can I get a heart shaped one? Call for information, 288-6006.

Ohhhh Biba! Biba Southampton on Jobs Lane and Biba East Hampton on Newtown Lane is off and running for the spring/summer season and really ready for the Memorial Day Weekend. Biba is fully stocked with the best summer fashions direct from Paris. Fashions like Capri pants in all your favorite colors and styles, floral skirts, halter and hanky tops, cool and sexy dresses for play and formal wear, summer pashmina's in pastels, bathing suits and snake skin prints in pants, tops and dresses. This is a one-stop shop for day and evening, dressing yourself from head to toe. Call 287-2300 and 324-2300 for her schedule. Biba is open late every single weekend.

No, you're not seeing double or forgetting which town you are shopping in. Christopher Fischer Cashmere Collections are in both towns now. This wonderful shop has opened its second store early this month. Originally on Jobs Lane, Southampton and now also on Main Street, East Hampton, Christopher Fischer, a leading cashmere sweater designer and manufacturer, with men's ladies and accessories and home collections. Fischer currently manufactures for some of the finest retail stores in the world, including Saks Fifth Avenue, NeimanMarcus, Barneys, New York, Bloomingdales, Harvey Nichols and Harrads. Now with his own total Cashmere Lifestyle stores, these new shops are the ideal showcase for his updated and contemporary luxury cashmere sweater, accessory and home collections with a major emphasis on color, style, value and service. Do stop in and enjoy!

Also on Jobs lane just opening for spring 2000 is Offshore Surf & Sport, Ltd. For the up coming seasons of spring and summer, Offshore will offer many products and activities in the water sport industry. Offshore has men's, women's and juniors apparel, swim wear and eye wear and also carries a variety of hard goods such as surfboards, kayaks, body boards, wakeboards and all types of beach accessories. They will also be displaying and selling paintings and photographs by our local artists. There is also an extensive rental program available that includes ocean kayaks, touring kayaks, surfboards, body and wake boards. Look for instructional kayak tours each weekend from May 'til October. Offshore will also be giving both private and group surf lessons along with certified swim instruction for all ages groups. This is a unique full service retail store of residents as well as visitors of the Hamptons. Information call, 287-2929.

Once again you are invited to America's oldest department store see the largest selection of indoor and outdoor home furnishing from around the world. Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street, Southampton, Montauk Highway, Bridgehampton and the Clearance Center on West Main Street, Southampton. Hildreth's has everything for your home, garden, patio and pool. Hildreth's is available for complete decorating and design service, always. I love this store, reminds me of the original Fortunoff's in Brooklyn when I was a small kid. Ooops, I take that back.

Bernadette O'Brien Fabrics and Interiors on Hampton Road in Southampton will help your choose from a large selection of fabrics, fabrics, fabrics! Replacing and making new slipcovers for that old couch or chair is a breeze for Bernadette, adding pillows, valences and such is also one of her specialties. Also available are Duettes Honeycomb shades, wood and mini blinds and Hunter Douglas window treatments. Call 287-0494.

Bridgehampton's Sleepy's has just what you need for those extra houseguests this summer season. There are incredible savings on Sealy Posturpedic, Simmons and Serta mattresses with express delivery every where, every day. Located on the Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton, you can visit their showroom or even order what you need by phone. Go for it!

Turkish Tea and Carpets, Fusun and Faruk Yorgancioglu, architects in Bridgehampton, are hosting a Turkish Carpet show and sale at their School Street home/studio. A talk about a group of carpets from their impressive collection of more than 8,000 pieces will be given on Saturday, May 27 through Monday, May 29 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Backed by the Turkish Government's export incentives which will benefit the victims of recent devastating earthquakes in Turkey, this show is an excellent opportunity to buy very high quality new pieces as well as the most beautiful antique pieces at very favorable prices. Call 537-2093 for information.

Another new shop that has popped up this season is Gems of the Past on Park Place in East Hampton. This is a very unique jewelry store that features one of a kind and unusual antique, estate and fine new jewelry. The owner Karen Adler is a graduate gemologist and is able to determine and purchase gemstone pieces that are truly the finest. And...if you don't see what you are looking for, she does personal jewelry shopping to find that one special item for you including rare gemstones. This colorful shop is painted bright pink complimenting the Victorian style floral border, dark wood and glass 1920's jewelry and display cabinets. Along with beautiful jewelry, you will find unusual antique and estate dresser items such as crystal perfume bottles, small boxes and powder jars. I myself have my grandmother's on my dresser. Give a call at 324-GEMS.

East Hampton was buzzing this weekend; the rain did not keep the locals or tourists away. I stopped in at Shoe-Inn on Main Street and found plenty of affordable great sandals, shoes, bags, and more to choose from. So guess what? I bought a few pair for the summer.

Hunting for bargains? Hot off the press, for five days only, on Tuesday, May 30 through Saturday, June 3, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., every item at the LVIS Bargain Books is half price. Located on Main Street, East Hampton. For information call 32403261.

Need Jeans? Alice has them, broken in, comfy, ready to wear 501 Jeans and jean jackets at unbeatable prices. Top top off your denim, you can treat yourself to that Right to the Moon Alice staple, a cashmere sweater, in tons of colors. Also eyecatching Hawaiian shirts and bright sun dresses and basket purses to die for. Right to the Moon Alice Vintage Clothing at the Antiques Center on Montauk Highway, East Hampton.

Also on Main Street is Amagansett's new shop Turtle Bay Antiques. A little out of the way, mid-village, but worth the walk there. There is a wonderful selection of American, European, and Asian furniture that include lamps art engravings, lithographs, botanical prints, chandeliers, cut glass, porcelain, mirrors and lots of lovely accessories. There is also interior decorating services available at this "open year round" shop. Janet Schwit, the owner welcomes you and will be happy to help you in any way she can. Call her for information at 267-0730. Thanks Janet for the tour.

Have you been to Lume on Main Street in Amagansett lately? Well, they have expanded their horizons and now carry nine lines of Fresh. They have added tabletop this season and a beautiful new line of Feng Shui candles. As always, Lume has lots of new and unique jewelry, purses, pareos – along with a large selection of candles, gifts and antiques. The early bird gets the worm.

Hello Starfish! One of my personal favorites, I had to stop by as long I was in Amagansett to see their new location in Amagansett Square. Starfish has an incredible selection of Flax linen clothing in beautiful shades of tomato, avocado, cobalt blue, straw and white. I just couldn't believe the prices on the antiques. I spotted a beautiful coffee table for only $150 and matte white McCoy pottery in soft sea shades of aqua, green and white foam for under $20, vases for only $6 and painted white antique furniture. Better than any yard sale, Lorraine has done it again. Call for store hours, 267-3455. See you there!

Off and running as usual to Sag Harbor, quickly checking all the sales and shops showing their new holiday wares. Sue's Gifts on Main Street has lots of everything. This shop is stocked full of unique merchandise that includes great hostess gifts, gift baskets, personalized gifts, garden, nautical, children's, beach gifts, and decorative accessories. There are great flags, pillows, Afghans, garden furniture, children's furniture and colorful aromatic candles. Whew! You can spend hours here, trust me.

A stone's throw away at Hedges on Main Street, you will find numerous place-mats and napkins made out of hemp, twigs, reeds, cotton and linen priced from $8 to sets of four hand embroidered place-mats for $125. frames, beautiful marble top and iron grilled Moroccan plant stands and hall table and my favorite thing was the 1940's rattan dining set which includes two arm chairs, four side chairs, glass top table and sideboard for a mere $7,200. I do think I'm serious about that raise.

Main Street's Kirkwood Gallery is fully stocked with antique furnishings and fine and decorative arts and has opened for the season. On Washington Street in Sag Harbor Dan and JoAnna have opened a Scandinavian home furnishing design gallery in the new Ben Krupinski building called Svenska. Do you think I did enough shopping for this week? I think so. I ran into the Style Bar for a pedicure and foot massage because I just couldn't make it home without having this wonderful foot treatment. I had a snack at their really classy juice bar and bought some great products for my feet, hands and hair. Thank you Ira and Perri for taking me without an appointment. Call for information and appointments at 725-6730.

Home sweet home, getting ready for the big Memorial Day weekend. My sons, Joe and Randy are visiting for the weekend with their wives, Janie and Maria and all the kids. Of course, my daughter Michele will be there too with Michael and Anthony. Thank goodness the girls are doing all the cooking; after all, I did all the shopping didn't I?

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Memorial Day Shopping! Have a safe and fun Memorial Day weekend.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

MABEL AND VICTOR D'AMICO'S HOME BECOMES A MUSEUM AS THE ART BARGE TURNS FORTY

Mabel and Victor D'Amico's home on Lazy Point is not only a "sight" to behold, but also a "site" to treasure, both literally and figuratively. Standing on Shore Road, off the beaten path from just about anywhere, a world onto-its-own, the dwelling is "empty" now in the conventional sense of the word. Pioneer arts educator and the Art Barge's founder, Victor D'Amico, died in 1987, and his wife and artist Mabel passed away two years ago at the age of 90.

Even so, the D'Amico home is anything but empty, its contents remaining intact as Mabel herself had left them. It's not merely her art objects and furniture that give the space life, however; it's also Mabel's special spirit that prevails throughout – one that suggests serenity, like her art.

And what art it is, taking over every cubbyhole and corner imaginable— from hand-blown glass balls in the living room which reflect the blue bay water outside and drinking glasses in the hallway, to Mabel's funky hand-made jewelry hung on a bedroom door, colorful clothes in a closet, and glass mosaics in her studio. (Mabel's Gourmet Magazines are obvious, too, now neatly shelved or sitting on the living room table.)

The D'Amico House

While one is struck by the extraordinary myriad of colors, shapes and textures which brings life to this house, one can't help but also be moved by the sense of the past. We can almost experience for ourselves the creation of each and every object which Mabel made with her loving, yet deft with hands.

The past is present in another ironic way, too. A black lacquered table and chairs from the Museum of Modern Art's board room remind one of Victor's long association with MOMA as its Founding Education Director.

Simply put, the D'Amico home is not only an homage to the people who lived there, but also a museum as well, where art is collected, perserved and shared. Chris Kohan, the Art Barge's Board of Directors' President and the D'Amicos' assistant for several years, is primarily responsible for seeing that such a mission comes to fruition.

Plans call for the house to serve as an exhibition space; as an invaluable teaching resource, art classes will be conducted in Mabel's studio there, including glass fusion techniques, ceramics and jewelry-making. No doubt, working on the bay beach just outside the house will also be a prime experience for landscape devotees.

But Mr. Kohan isn't going to stop there. The home will also function as a study and archival center, assistants already busy at cataloging and organizing material and slides. One can already sense the uniqueness of this particular museum – a living, breathing place where the past, present and future become one.

The Art Barge will be having its 40th Anniversay with a Founder's Day Celebration on Saturday, May 27, from 3-6 pm.

PLAYING IT TO THE MAXIMUS

Now, on the other hand (which got severed) in the Gladiator film, you are not given a chance to think about the old "Sword and Sandal" scandalous epic slugs of yesteryear by De Mille and others, replete in leather puttee under togas and laurel crowns, as Emperors directing actors like Charlton Heston parting the waves of Victor Mature's hair..already clipped by Rita Hayworth.

Instead, Dream Works' good idea was to ask a truly terrific director, Ridley Scott, of the futuristic Alien and Blade Runner to step back into time and take his chances in the crowded (with computer generated, degenerate Romans) Colosseum.. armed only with good taste, great concepts and $103 million. He made excellent, though off beat, choices in casting. Russell Crowe as The Gladiator give a fine human quality, as well as great strength to a role that could have busted this block of Styrofoam granite. As it is, it's grand to see..mostly because the gut-wrenching aspects of the film are not the bleeding body parts but, the bleeding hearts story of the common bloke put to the test. Actually, as Crowe's strange Australian tongue puts it..it's "Sweet as a bitter biscuit."

LYNCH BAGES DIRECT

'99 LYNCH BAGES: OPENING $ RELEASED IN FRANCE TODAY

1999 LYNCH BAGES 90-93 pts R. Parker

$420 CASE 3 cases at $395 each

"Lynch Bages has fashioned their sexiest, most succulent effort since the hedonistic fruit bomb produced in 1990. This blackberry and cassis-flavored 1999 possesses a fat, juicy mid-section, and outstanding purity, ripeness and glycerin in the long finish, which oozes over the palate with no bumps. Jean Michel Cazes feels the 1999 is the "BEST SINCE 1990". Maturity now-2015 Robert Parker 90-93

1996 LYNCH BAGES $710 case - mix with any 3 cases on this page for $680 cs

With superlative structure, a boatload of ripe tannin, massive body, and dazzling intensity and power, this may be the greatest Lynch Bages produced since the 1989 and 1990. Anticipated maturity: 2001-2025. 93 PTS R. PARKER

1995 LYNCH BAGES $795 case - mix with any 3 cases $745 cs

Deep ruby-colored, with an evolved nose of sweet, smoky, earthy, black currant fruit, this fleshy, round, seductive, fat and fruity Lynch Bages should drink well young, yet age for two decades. Anticipated maturity: 2000-2015. 90 PTS R. PARKER

DAVE SOKOLIN: I think the 95 is the most balanced Lynch in years.

1993 LYNCH BAGES $625 case - mix with any 3 cases $595 cs

"this dense ruby/purple colored wine offers good structure, medium body, and soft, ripe, alluring flavors possessing fat, glycerin, and fruit. Hopefully, the herbal aromas will develop a more cedary character with another 1-2 years of bottle age. There is plenty of black currant, jammy fruit in the wine's flavor profile. Anticipated maturity: now-2008." 89 PTS R. PARKER

DAVE SOKOLIN: Better to drink than most other vintages. This wine actually tastes like the 1982 Lynch. Everyone who has bought it in the past wants more!

1996 Leroy Bourgogne Rouge	$22.92 bottle
1996 Leroy Richebourg	$695 per bottle
1996 Leroy Musigny	$800 per bottle
1990 Leroy Richebourg	$1200 per bottle

Question: Want to catch a glimpse of the genius of Lalou-Bize Leroy? Then try stunning 1996 Leroy Bourgogne Rouge from Leroy's best vintage, ever. The wine is a chewy, thick Red Burgundy that softly and gently coats the palate with the ripe fruit flavors characteristic of the legendary '96 vintage. This stuff is special. It drinks now and will easily age for 5 more years. It tastes suspiciously similar to many of Leroy's higher-level wines for a fraction of the price.

"Lalou Bize-Leroy stands alone at the top of Burgundy's quality hierarchy Anyone who loves great Burgundy, must realize that her wines embarrass much of what is produced in Burgundy." ROBERT PARKER

"1996 is the sort of Burgundy vintage the world has been anxiously waiting for. They have a concentration of ripe fruit which is exhilarating"

Paws Across the Hamptons

It's that time again! Strap on the dog's leash and lace up your most comfortable walking shoes because on Sunday, June 4, it's the Dan's Papers Seventh Annual "Paws Across The Hamptons" Dog Walk, to benefit ARF, (Rain date – June 11.)

Last year over 350 dogs and their trusty companions walked the walk and barked the bark! What a sight it is to see the large variety of breeds attending this great event. Large, small, short haired, long haired, "PAWS" has them all. And the bond that exists between the owners is undeniable.

The day begins at 9 a.m. when registration opens at the East Hampton Airport Clear Zone, on Daniel's Hole Road, just a bit north of the Animal Rescue Fund's state-of-the-art shelter. Just watching the stream of cars pulling in with excited dogs hanging out of the windows in anticipation of a Hampton's event that they can truly call their own, is an incomparable sight. And of course, to add to the chic allure, all the private jets are zooming in for a landing directly above the field. Totally a Hampton's moment.

At 10 a.m. the ribbon will be cut, once again this year by one of our lead sponsors, Lisa Blinderman, owner of (and devout animal lover) Second Nature Markets and mother of Polly, a rescued Arfian, who stole the title, "Beast of Show", last year.

As always, Dan Rattiner will be there with Moon to lead the walk. Beach Radio WBEA – 104.7, which has been the official "PAWS" radio station since the events inception, will once again host the beloved "Peoples Dog Awards", immediately following the walk. Featuring the "Best Stupid Dog Trick", the winner will walk away with a totally appropriate prize, two tickets to Late Show with Letterman. And, look for Connor, the ARFan Chair Dog, to help lead the walk.

Start raising those pledges now! The top adult fund raiser receives a fall/winter weekend getaway for two, with Fifi and Fido at the Captain Jefferd's Inn, in Kennebunkport, Maine. Second place, a giant basket of gourmet dog treats compliments of Joyce Schulman and Eric Cohen of the wonderful Rover Group and third place, six months supply of dog biscuits galore, provided by Science Diet. The top "under 16" fund raiser will win a shiny new bicycle from Bikehampton.

A special component this year is the involvement of all of the local middle schools. The top fund raising student at each middle school will win a gift certificate from Gubbins Running Ahead. Thanks to Dr. Jan Furman, East Hampton Schools Superintendent, who has generously donated her time and signed on the Dog Walk School Chairperson. Look for her walking Hershey Bear and Brittany, her beloved cocker spaniels, on June 4. Naturally, all recipients will receive a commemorative Dog Walk T-shirt, donated once again this year by Old Navy.

This year's Dog Walk is sponsored by Dan's Papers, Bookhampton, Second Nature Markets, Beach 104.7, Iams Dayton and Osborne Insurance and Dayton Halstead Real Estate.

Our official on-site "Dog Walk" veterinarians are once again Jonathan Turetsky (Vet Clinic of East Hampton and David Hadland (Shinnecock Animal Hospital).

Call ARF for a registration form. Adult fee is twenty dollars in advance and twenty-five dollars on the day of the event. The pup fee for children under sixteen is ten dollars. For information call ARF, 537-0400 or Linda B. Shapiro, 329-5480.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Memorial Day weekend sounds the trumpet for the official beginning of summer, no matter what the weather brings. It also signals a light-hearted and more casual way of entertaining. Gone, for the moment, are formal dinner party plans with individually served courses and formally set tables.

A suitable way for more informal entertaining, whether indoors or out, is to have friends participate at a barbecue where everyone can be part of the fun. To achieve this, think do-ahead – something marinated to cook briefly over glowing coals.

Quick-cooking fajitas, our Tex-Mex import, can be made with beef, chicken or even steak-like Portobello mushrooms. Guests can take their turn at the grill, choose their "thing" (unapologetic beef lovers and vegetarians alike, will be happy campers) then help themselves to one or a variety of fajitas to roll up in a tortilla with sauteed onions and peppers and a dollop of a tangy salsa. The distinct smoky flavors rising from the grill, even now, smells finger-licking good to me.

Whip up a favorite salad or two and finish with wedges of cooling and refreshing watermelon – and voila, a memorable Memorial Day weekend.

FAJITAS ON THE GRILL

The name fajita comes from the Spanish word "faja" meaning little girdle. This southwestern specialty, traditionally made with skirt steak can be sautéed or grilled. Skirt steak, a cut, shaped like a belt is the preferred cut for fajitas. When prepared in a like manner, boneless, skinless chicken breasts and Portobello mushrooms are an equally delicious variation. Whichever you choose, fajitas are tasty, easy and quick to prepare.

Serves 6-8

3-4 pounds skirt steak,
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2-3 tablespoons chopped fresh coriander (cilantro)
1 jalapeno, seeded and finely chopped
1/3-1/2 cup lime juice
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 cup olive oil
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper

For Serving:
Tortillas
Sauteed peppers and onions
Tomatillo salsa

1. Trim and discard excess fat from the skirt steaks. Place steaks in a non-corrosive dish (Pyrex) or a plastic zip-lock bag.

2. Combine remaining ingredients in a mixing bowl and stir to mix until thoroughly incorporated. Pour marinade over the steaks and let marinate for several hours or overnight, turning occasionally. Refrigerate, covered.

3. Prepare your grill until coals are ashen gray with a rosy glow. When ready to cook, remove meat from marinade, pat dry with paper towels and place on the preheated grill about three inches from the heat. Cook steaks, turning once or twice, basting with the leftover marinade until it is well seared on the outside and preferably rare on the inside or springy to the touch, about 3-4 minutes on each side side. Remove to a carving board, slice thinly on the diagonal. Fill tortillas with sauteed peppers and onions, a dollop of tomatillo salsa and roll up.

FOR CHICKEN FAJITAS: Use 3-4 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts and proceed as above. Grill about 3-4 minutes (Boneless breasts have no fat and are thinner than skirt steak) on each side or until springy to the touch. Chicken fajitas should be cooked through. Serve as above.

FOR PORTOBELLO FAJITAS: Select large, smooth, Portobello mushrooms with nicely rounded caps. Cut off stem flush with the gills (use for stock or discard). Rinse quickly under running water and wipe dry with paper towel. Score the cap and the stubby cut surface of the stem. Prepare marinade as above, but substitute coriander with 3-4 scallions, trimmed and thinly sliced. Marinate as above. Place on oiled grill over hot coals and grill for 3-4 minutes on each side until tender. While cooking, press down occasionally with a flat spatula to hold in the juices. Slice for serving as above or use as an appetizer.

SAUTEED PEPPERS AND ONIONS

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 large vidalia or Spanish onions, peeled and thinly sliced
2 red bell pepper, cored, deseeded and thinly sliced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground peppers

1. Warm oil in a large skillet and add the onions and peppers. Toss to coat in the oil and saute for 3-4 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

2. Cover the vegetables with a square of wax paper and cover the skillet. Cook over low heat for 5-6 minutes longer until tender. Check the vegetables now and then to redistribute them in the skillet as necessary. Serve with fajitas.

TOMATILLO SALSA

Tomatillo, known as a Mexican green tomato, is a berry and not a tomato at all. Use it to make this tangy salsa that will give more flavor than the current tomatoes in the market.

3 tomatillo, papery outer skin removed
1/2 small red onion, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 small zucchini. Sliced and diced
1 jalapeno, seeded and finely diced
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon rice wine vinegar
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Pour boiling water over tomatillo, dry and coarsely chop. Soak onions in bowl of cold water for 15 minutes, drain and squeeze dry in a clean kitchen towel. Combine tomatillo and onion with remaining ingredients and season to taste with salt and pepper. Prepare up to one day ahead, refrigerate, covered and bring to room temperature before serving.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Serafina
29 Main St, Sag Harbor
725-0101

What makes a restaurant memorable? Good food, good service, and, of course, a pleasant atmosphere. On a scale of one to ten, the Serafina gets a big ten, even on a Saturday night when most restaurants are crowded, as the Serafina was when we got there around 7:30 p.m. But the crowds were being handled expeditiously by the hostess and co-proprietor, Lynn Cardile, a charming woman who took great pains to make sure you received a table as soon as possible. How she could maintain her cool charm with all the hustle and bustle going on was truly remarkable (I gave her a "ten plus").

I lost no time in firing questions at Lynn as soon as we were seated and received menus. How long h ead the restaurant been open? Three years, she told me, and it was also the third restaurant she and her husband and chef, Frank Caniglia, had owned. The Serafina specializes in Italian cuisine, though, of course, it serve a variety of other exotic dishes.

The setting is cozy and at the same time elegant: fresh roses and candles at each table, Victorian style hanging lamps. And typical of a good restaurant, a basket of warm breads and bread sticks were quickly delivered to our table, as were tall glasses of ice water with a touch of lemon.

My companion and I winked at each other as we eyed the menu. What a fine selection of delectables: appetizers, including calamari, mussels, clams, antipasto freddo and mushroom tomato ragout, all between $10 and $12; and a choice of salads from $6.00 to $8.00. Pastas ranged from $17 to $23; entrees from $21 to $24.

When the waitress told us about the specials not on the me nu, I decided on crab and shrimp soup, crab cakes on a bed of greens, and broiled tuna for an entree. My companion chose the special soup, the Serafina salad and a rib-eye steak. We ordered the house white wine.

As we sipped our wine, my companion commented that the location was ideal, since you could walk to the wharves after dinner and take in a few local exhibitions, as well. I nodded "yes" as I began to sip my tangy soup, served in a large flat bowel – with an added dash of pepper provided by our attentive waiter.

While I was waiting for my crab cakes, I gazed at the tables surrounding us. There were many young couples as well as more elderly types, and, perhaps what struck me most was that everyone, both young and old, seemed to be having a great time; lots of smiles, laughter and good conversation. It was as if everyone was part of a large family enjoying a good home cooked – but very special meal.

After I devoured my crab cakes, which, incidentally, were spicy and succulent, I tasted my tuna, served with asparagus, succotash, and a spicy horseradish sauce which I softened with touches of tarter sauce. However, after my first bite of tuna, I noticed how rare the tuna was – far too rare for my taste. I was in a quandary, until my companion suggested calling the waiter and asking that the tuna be grilled a little more. Why not? I thought.

Before I could catch the waiter's eye, Lynn Cardile came over to ask if everything was all right. When I told her I would prefer my tuna steak more on the medium side, she laughed and said , "But of course. No problem." She whisked up the plate and took it to the kitchen. A waiter returned in a few minutes with it cooked exactly as I had requested.

My companion had no complaints. Her steak, crusty on the outside and medium rare on the inside, was just what she wanted. I took a bite and nodded my approval as she sampled a bit of my tuna.

The servings were ample and so satisfying that we debated whether or not to have desert. However, after a waitress came by and rattled off a barrage of tasty treats, we decided to share a portion of the toasted almond and Ameretto cream cake – and some decaf coffee.

As we left contented and satiated, Lynn waved a cheery "goodbye", and we were off for a pleasant stroll along the street toward the wharves.

On our next visit I want to try the calamari fritti, or perhaps the pesto Prince Edward Island mussels... or maybe clams on the halfshell, not to mention a fine plate of penne rigati marinara, shrimp arrabbiato – which makes me wonder if I should have myself cloned so that I can take advantage of all the wonderful dishes the Serafina serves. And, of course, all my "look alikes" must make reservations to make sure we won't be left out. Consider the Serafina a prime target on your dining-out list.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

The Maidstone Arms: "Sophisticated American Cuisine"

"The Maidstone Arms is the epitome of elegant country dining." –Joanne Starkey, The New York Times

The 9th century inn poised atop a small hill overlooking Town Pond in East Hampton, is host to one of the best restaurants in the Hamptons, The Maidstone Arms (207 Main St., East Hampton, NY, E631) 324-5006). Headed by Executive Chef and General Manager William S. Valentine, the Maidstone Arms restaurant serves memorable contemporary American cuisine with an international influence. But don't take our word for it, Richard Lourie writing for Gourmet magazine, cited Valentine's food as, "the best cuisine in the Hamptons."

"Chef Bill Valentine's kitchen is vibrant morning, noon and night." –Peter Gianotti. Newsday

The Maidstone Arms serves breakfast, lunch and dinner year round. Valentine changes his menu seasonally to feature the season's best harvests – from fresh local fish to organic homegrown vegetables. The breakfast menu features house-made scones, muffins and breads, as well as creative omelettes, country French toast and Belgian waffles. For lunch, Valentine prepares Maidstone's own rum-smoked salmon, house-made pate, crab cakes, chilled salad of roasted lacquered Long Island duck and grilled sirloin steak with hand-cut French fries. At dinner, appetizer choices include rich New York State foie gras, refreshing honey cured tuna sashimi and chilled poached shrimp with vindaloo vinaigrette. "The best main course was a high, handsome filet mignon placed above a potato cake and napped with a blue cheese sauce full of wild mushrooms," comments New York Times food critic Joanne Starkey. Other award winning entrees include tender roasted rack of Colorado lamb with curried sweet potatoes, roast Long Island lacquered duck with peanut scallion and dried tangerine congee, and potato wrapped local monkfish over broccoli rabe.

"The romantic dining rooms provide quiet and dignified backdrops for the sophisticated American cuisine."

–Zagat Survey 2000

The Boat Room features a nautical theme with paintings of tall ships, model ships on each table and a cozy fireplace. The main dining room boasts a softer mood with French blue walls and floral prints accented by antique plates. Both rooms feature large comfy upholstered armchairs and crisp white tablecloths – a "truly civilized air," states Zagat's 2000. Celebrities seem to think so too. Rene Russo, Diana Ross, Alec Baldwin, Kim Basinger, Billy Joel and Kevin Costner have all sampled Valentine's excellent cuisine. For further information please call The Maidstone Arms at 631-321-6006 or WordHampton PR at 631-329-0050.

(East Hampton, LI, N... May, 2000) A classic inn nestled on the outskirts of East Hampton village, The Maidstone Arms (207 Main Street, East Hampton, NY, E631J 324-5006) offers Hamptons visitors historic charm with modern comfort. This nineteen room inn, dating back to the 17th century, overlooks the town pond, is surrounded by majestic trees and is adjacent to the South End Cemetery — resting place for many of East Hampton's forefathers. The inn is just minutes away from popular boutiques, chic restaurants, art galleries and the movie theater. It's also a short distance from Main Beach – one of the East Coast's finest beaches – where you'll find the pounding surf of the Atlantic Ocean and an uninterrupted marine vista. A multitude of other activities such as golf, tennis, fishing and winery tours are nearby. The Maidstone Arms is, as InStyle magazine put it, "where to stay in the Hamptons."

"The Maidstone Arms in East Hampton is just a brilliant, stunning place."

–Steve Gaines. The Best of Everything. New York Magazine

The Maidstone Arms offers twelve guest rooms, four suites and three private cottages. All rooms are attractively decorated with antique furniture (for sale via "The Antique Boutique"), authentic art and fresh flowers. Aside from the charming decor, the quarters include private baths, direct dial telephone, cable television and air conditioning. The cottages feature woodburning fireplaces and one even has kitchen facilities. Each room has its own special detail. One

Limited room service is offered for guests such as morning coffee, afternoon tea or evening nightcaps. Included with each night's stay is a continental breakfast featuring "Maidscones by Nina." Winter, Spring, Summer and Fall, The Maidstone Arms has it all.

As a four-season inn, The Maidstone Arms complements each season with a corresponding atmosphere. In the summer, wicker rocking chairs grace the front porch, while homemade summer coolers are served in the rear garden. For active guests, East Hampton's beautiful beaches and water activities are a short drive away. Persian rugs, carved pumpkins and speckled green and yellow gourds bring in autumn at The Maidstone Arms. It's a fabulous time of year for a brisk walk to East Hampton village or the nearby Atlantic Ocean to enjoy the colorful foliage. As temperatures drop and winter settles in, warm duvets are placed on each bed and roaring fires are constantly burning throughout the main sitting rooms. (Guests may head outdoors to ice skate on the pond across the street.) Finally, as the days begin to warm, daffodils grace the front lawn to signify the arrival of spring. Casual bike rides, winery tours and horseback riding are all suggested activities.

No matter what the season, The Maidstone Arms is the perfect setting for those who seek relief and relaxation on the East End.

Della Femina's: A Zagat Pick

Eight years after Della Femina (99 North Main Street, 631-329-6666) first opened its doors, this East End eatery continues to wow foodies and critics. Famed adman Jerry Della Femina's eponymous restaurant has flourished in the Hamptons notoriously competitive culinary world and established itself as a dining mainstay. And Della Femina promises to be a force in Hamptons dining for a long time to come. Restaurants come and go in the Hamptons, but Della Femina has continually built on its first-rate reputation and now enjoys a loyal following all year long. In fact, this past winter Della Femina drew such consistent crowds – even midweek – that they were never able to take the customary Hamptons restaurant February hiatus. They were just too busy!

New Chef Carries the Torch

Former executive chef Kevin Penner, whose fare garnered three stars from both The New York Times and Newsday, left his post last spring to head the new Della Femina restaurant in Manhattan (212-752-0111). The East Hampton kitchen reins are now in the skillful hands of former sous chef James Carpenter. According to food and wine expert Anthony Dias Blue of WCBS Newsradio 88, "the transition has been seamless." The 2000 Zagat's Survey of Long Island Restaurants concurs, including Della Femina once again on its top 40 "Most Popular Restaurant" list – to which only three other East End restaurants were named. Zagat surveyors cited the "superb cuisine" from a "creative chef," declaring that Della Femina is "the place to be." Carpenter continues Della Femina's tradition of serving uncomplicated but impressive seasonal American fare. Appetizing selections grace the menu with choices such as the warm Grilled Hudson Valley Foie Gras with blueberry johnny cake, Sagpond verjus and maple sauce ($18); the Pan-Roasted Maine "Day Boat" Halibut entree with truffled potato mousseline, forest mushroom and leek ragu ($28); and the Mezzi Rigatoni with basil, tomato, pine nuts, parmesan cheese and fresh mozzarella ($22). Memorable desserts include the Caramelized Banana Tartelette with coconut sorbet and dark rum sauce ($8).

Stars of all Stripes

Della Femina is as well known for its celeb-studded clientele as its memorable meals. In just the last year, Della Femina played host to Camilla Parker Bowles and her entourage during her first trip to America; served as a romantic backdrop for the one-year wedding anniversary of Today host Matt Lauer and Annette Roque; and was the dining destination of choice for Jerry Seinfeld and Billy Joel after they shook hands on their multi-million-dollar real estate deal. Other recent notable guests have included Sarah Jessica Parker and Matthew Broderick, Ed Koch, Candace Bergen, Dr. Ruth Westheimer, and celebrity chef Bobby Flay. With stars in the dining room, glowing reviews and sparkling culinary fare, the future continues to look bright for Della Femina – for this season and many to come. For further information, call WordHampton Public Relations at 631-329-0050 or Della Femina in East Hampton at 631-329-6666.

Executive Chef, Kevin Penner

Prior to heading the kitchen at the new Della Femina restaurant in Manhattan, Kevin Penner made a name for himself in the Hamptons as one of the top chefs around. A native of the Midwest, he came to Della Femina in East Hampton from Coco Pazzo in Chicago. He staged at Gordon and Charlie Trotter's in Chicago, as well. Penner was Pat Trama's chef de cuisine for four years at Della Femina in East Hampton before taking the kitchen reigns in 1996. His exquisite food has garnered him an appearance at the James Beard House in New York City as well as a s-star rating from Newsday and an excellent from The New York Times – one of four restaurants on the East End of Long Island to achieve such a distinction.

Penner currently functions as the executive chef for Della Femina in Manhattan and Della Femina in East Hampton.

Chef de Cuisine, James Carpenter

James Carpenter hails from Patterson, NY. An early kitchen job at the five-star restaurant Harrold's in Stormville, NY inspired him to pursue a culinary career. In 1992 he graduated from Johnson and Wales College in South Carolina and subsequently honed his skills for several years down south. Carpenter spent time at Louis' Charleston Grill under chef Louis Osteen, and at The Dining Room in the Ritz-Carlton in Atlanta, GA under Gunther Seeger. He also worked with Susan Spicer at Bayonne in New Orleans, LA and was the executive chef at Cafi Sbisa in the French Quarter. Carpenter then returned to New York and was instrumental in the opening of Savanna's in Southampton, serving as sous chef for the restaurant's first two seasons. For the past three years, he has worked under the skillful eye of Executive Chef Kevin Penner at Della Femina in East Hampton. When he's not cooking, James likes to brew his own beer and enjoys volunteering his time at the Southampton Publick House in exchange for the opportunity to perfect his technique with master brewers. An avid gardener, James enjoys tending his organic vegetable and herb garden. James confesses that as a true food lover; his favorite thing to do on his day off is to go out to eat.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Spraying is a messy business, which is why so few gardeners, organic or chemical are satisfied with the crops they get from their fruit trees. When we spray our orchards, of course, we use only micro – nutrient foliar (fish/seaweed) sprays for stress; Biological, Botanical and Mineral sprays for controlling insects and diseases. Our goal is to reduce to a bare minimum the number of times a grower has to spray.

The old – fashioned way of controlling apple pests is to use preventive sprays all season long. Note: Botanical controls are from plants which have shown to have insecticidal qualities, and should only be used in transitional situations, while developing the right organic feeding and maintenance program. An example of some botanical insect controls are: Rotenone, Pyrethrin, Ryania, Sabadilla, Keem Oil and Sunspray ultra—fine vegetable oil.)

Using a botanical insect control, we sprayed some blocks of apple trees in our orchard fourteen – times during the full season. In other blocks, we cut the sprays to seven – times and targeted them to a six – week period in late spring when plum curculios and codling moths were laying eggs. The lower number of sprayings produced very good results. Ninety-four percnt of that crop had zero damage, and just 6% had damage. The season – long program of fourteen sprayings produced virtually identical results, there was no advantage to spraying more.

The keys to getting good organic fruit is having a balanced feeding program developed through soil testing and tissue analysis, and knowing exactly what pests are causing problems and concentrating your efforts on just those. The old method of control, preventive spraying, is a blanket approach that aims to stop every conceivable problem. The result is oversprayed fruit, wasted time and wasted money.

At our research farm efforts are directed toward the three – major apple insects; plum curculio, codling moth and apple maggot. and the single most destructive apple disease, scab. Here's a closer look at each of them and what we've learned about how to keep them from becoming problems in your apple trees.

Apple scab is a fungus that grows on the leaves and fruits of apple trees. It disfigures fruit, and when leaf damage is heavy, the fruit develops poorly. Apple scab spores can germinate when the temperatures is as low as 43°F, if the skin of leaves or fruit stays wet long enough for the organism to take hold. At low temperatures apple scab needs up to thirty – hours of wetness. And the longer wetness persists, the more severe the infection becomes.

For the organic apple grower, the first line of defense is to plant scab – resistant apples. In our tests we used LIBERTY, and even without spray it came through the summer free of the disease.

For varieties that are not scab resistant, we use organic fungus mineral sprays made of liquid copper and sulfur. We also use biological fungicides with disease suppressive organisms. Biological fungicides are beneficial microbes that protect plants from disease pathogens.

We had good results last year with these varieties also, timing our sprays according to the weather forecasts to avoid possible scab infection periods and to cover new, young growth. We applied the mineral fungus spray ten – times between April 5th and June 25th, the end of the scab infection season here on Long Island.

Plum curculio is hard to control, it lays its eggs in wild plums and cherries, but has come to like apple as well. The adults are small, dark weevils that over – winter in woods and hedgerows. They move into apple trees when they are ready to lay eggs in the tiny fruit. Heavy damage can occur within a few days. For efficient control you must be on the lookout for them and act the first sign that they've arrived. Watch for small crescent – shaped cuts on the young fruit, where the female has slit the

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

In last week's column, I thanked the efforts of particular legislators. Senator Carl Marcellino (R) and his staff, including director Fred Anderson, played a key role in obtaining an "uplift" as its called in political jargon, in the state budget for increasing reimbursement to Soil & Water Conservation Districts (SWCD). The increase in the figure was $900,000, not $900 million as erroneously stated in that column. The increase is historic for SWCDs across the state. Full reimbursement for all districts is now $1.86 million. That means each district may receive up to the $30,000 statutory maximum for environmental projects implemented on behalf of the state.

Here in Suffolk County, the SWCD is a partner with Cornell Cooperative Extension, USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, Suffolk County Department of Health, Long Island Farm Bureau, and other groups working together to help farmers, landowners, and municipalities follow "best management practices" as it relates to soil and water conservation and overall water quality concerns. Many thanks to Senator Marcellino and his staff for their leadership and support of this important program for all New Yorkers.

Talking about water, I think we've had enough for awhile. I keep a rain gauge at home. We had a couple of inches over the last week. We are currently stuck in a wet weather pattern. Potatoes like these conditions to a point, but now we have enough moisture, we need some sunshine or well be having other problems. The yucky weather this past weekend kept people home so the farmstand business suffered. The farmstand/tourist attractions are so weather dependent, but there's not much we can do about that unless someone knows God personally. I just hope the weather straightens out before too long or the strawberries could get hurt!

Interesting times we live in. In politics, that is. Assembly Speaker Shelly Silver is being challenged by Assembly Majority Leader Mike Bragman, an upstate legislator. These coup attempts are rare but do happen occasionally. The outcome is still up in the air, but you know what – it only furthers the democratic process. For a hundred years or more, New York State government has been run by the committee of three, the Governor, the Senate Majority Leader and the Speaker of the Assembly. Sometimes they all need a wake-up call to include their colleagues in the decision-making process. So it may turn out to do some good. The other big news, of course, is Rudy stepping down from a run for the US Senate. Congressman Rick Lazio from Suffolk County has jumped into the race as the Republican candidate with support from Governor Pataki. Rick is young, energetic and has always wanted to run for the Senate. The race will be close, as both Rick Lazio and Hillary Clinton are articulate, intelligent and capable candidates. Fortunately for us, LIFB has a good relationship with each. Good luck to both I hope they keep the debate clean and on the issues.

Joseph Gergela III is executive director of Long Island Farm Bureau

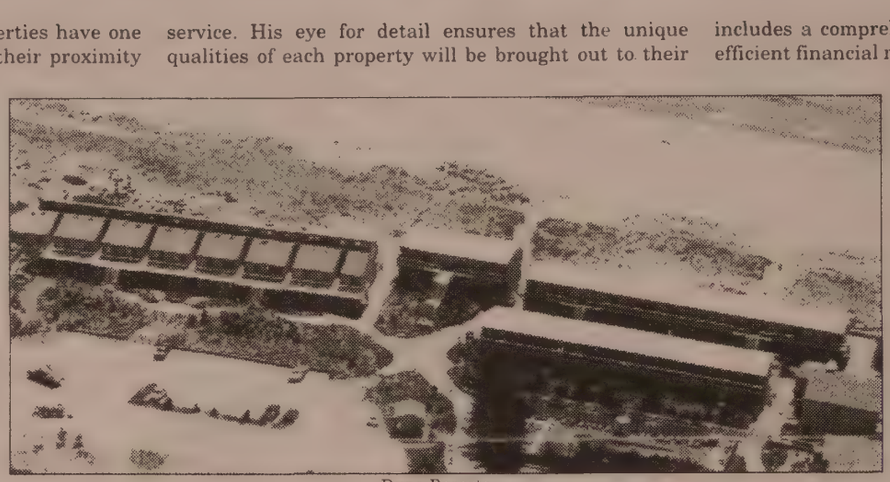
Premier Properties at Dune Resorts

The Hampton's premier resort properties have one thing in common — and it's not just their proximity to some of the world's finest beaches. The key to their successful operation is the customized, professional management provided by Dune Resorts. (74 Montauk Hwy., East Hampton, LI, NY [631] 329-1233). Dune Resorts is the largest full-service property management company on Long Island's scenic East End. With a roster of over a dozen properties, Dune Resorts oversees luxury resorts from East Hampton to Montauk as well as co-op and condo residences in East Hampton, Bridgehampton and Sag Harbor.



Dune Resorts

A Hands-On Owner Makes the Difference

With his professional team of corporate and on-site employees, Dune Resort's owner Jim Zaborski establishes and upholds the highest standards of property maintenance, appearance and service. His eye for detail ensures that the unique qualities of each property will be brought out to their fullest potential. Charged with satisfying both property owners and guests, Dune Resort develops an individualized management plan for each property that also includes a comprehensive sales and marketing effort, efficient financial management and personnel training.

"We do our utmost to maintain the integrity of these properties on a day-to-day, week-to-week and year-by-year basis," states Zaborski.

All in a Day's Work

Operating a management company in a resort community presents its own set of challenges. Dune Resorts has forty employees on its payroll during the off-season — but that number swells to 235 in season. It's during the off-season that Zaborski strives to ready his properties for the annual onslaught. He just prepared, cleaned and inspected 888 total units (526 are hotel units; 326 are co-op/condo units). And improvements of the major sort necessitated by wear and tear and the proximity to salt water keeps Dune Resorts busy year-skin to deposit an egg.

When we found the first scars, we began spraying immediately, and continued applications because of the short active life of botanical pest controls, until adults stopped moving into the orchards. This produced very good results.

Another method for dealing with curculio is to shake the tree or the limbs. At this, the insects will instantly drop out of the tree and play dead. By putting a white drop - cloth under the tree, you can easily see how many curculios are in your trees and destroy them. We tried this method in one plot and found that it produced as good a result as spraying using botanicals. In a home orchard of just a few trees, this method is no more time consuming than spraying.

The codling moth visits apple trees only briefly to lay its eggs on the fruit. The newly hatched larvae burrow immediately to the core of apples, where they feed, leaving the flesh of the fruit largely undamaged.

Like curculios, codling moths are active early in the season and are controlled by using a botanical spray program. So the sprayings we made against curculio prevented moth damage, too. Only 3% of the fruit in our low – spray program had signs of codling moth damage.

Apple maggots, this pest is the larva of a fly that visits the fruit to lay eggs all through the season. Where the adult flies are numerous, the apple maggot is a devastating problem because the larva burrows throughout the flesh, ruining the fruit.

There is an effective control that involves no spraying. We use red spheres about the size of an apple, these are extremely attractive to the adult fly. Coat the spheres with Tangle Trap and you've got a trap that nearly 100% effective for apple maggot fly. The sticky red spheres should be hung in the trees with five to eighteen inches of open space around them, one trap for every 100 or so apples you expect the tree to carry.

At Spring Meadow we continue our research and our primary goal is to further reduce the number of times we spray botanicals. What will allow us to do this is a better understanding of the habits of insects we are trying to control.

We are becoming more familiar with these pests. This familiarity has bred confidence in our ability to consistently harvest clean apples with no dependence on toxic chemicals. And by maintaining the natural balance in our orchards, we've been able to control mites, scale, aphids and other apple pests without lifting a finger.

A natural pest control strategy should include a combination of defenses ranging from beneficial insects, traps, botanicals and biologicals.

DOGGIE DISH

As a trainer here on the East End of Long Island, much of my time with clients is spent discussing question and subjects which have little or nothing to do with training. Some of their most frequent concerns are healthcare and emergency facilities, hotels, restaurants, shops and beaches where they can freely enjoy the company of their pet. Grooming, tick prevention, food and supplies are often the topic of conversation, while many clients are in search for pet sitters, play groups and boarding accommodations.

Often, prospective clients are in search for a second or third puppy, or they are replacing the loving friend they have lost. Picking the right dog for your family takes much consideration. It is a good idea to know what that adorable bundle of joy will be like in six or eight months. Many dogs are abandoned only because they have grown to be bigger than expected, and the owner cannot handle them. Or maybe adopting an older dog is the way to go.

More often than I care to think about, dogs are available for adoption through local organizations right here in the Hamptons, and for many reasons. Those reasons are, more times than not, because of circumstances that have nothing to do with the dog's behavior. Too many people are under the assumption that dogs are left in shelters because they bite, bark or are destructive beyond help. This is simply not true. Shelters and rescue organizations are filled with wonderful loving pets that need good homes. If you are looking for a particular breed, most likely there is a rescue foundation devoted to the rescue, care and finding homes for that breed.

So, I have put together 10 simple questions, I think may help you make a decision.

1. Will someone be home to train and care for this new pup, or will he be alone all day?
2. Is everyone in the household in agreement that this is a good idea?
3. Is everyone in the household ready to do their part in caring for this new pup?
4. Are you sure you are not getting the pup for the wrong reason; i.e. guilted into it, a present for a child, boredom, loneliness?
5. Can you afford the additional expenses such as visits regularly required by a veterinarian?
6. Do you know how to housebreak and train this new puppy or are you willing to seek professional help if necessary?
7. Are you willing to do a little investigative work and find out which is the appropriate breed , sex, and age for your lifestyle and circumstances?
8. Can you provide care for this pup or take him with you should you need to travel?
9. Have you addressed any allergy problems that household members might suffer from?
10. Last, but of utmost importance, is this an act of love?

If you answered "no" to any one of the ten questions, my suggestion is that you buy a computer or a new car instead, and do not consider the aforementioned!

Start by making a list. Write down all of your questions and discuss the answers with household members. Just as most couples prefer to "plan" their parenthood, it is best to plan the adoption of a dog. Please always think of this adoption as a lifelong commitment, the dog's life that is, and not a spur of the moment decision, to be discarded at later date!

Whether you choose to start with a new puppy or to adopt an older dog, please realize that this is an establishment of an inter-species relationship in which only one can be in charge, (obviously you), and with proper handling will result in optimal enjoyment for both. Training removes the obstacle of communication and enables us to address behavioral issues we could not handle otherwise. It requires patience, time and plenty of love.

Dogs respond to three things; voice tone, touch, and body language. However, as a professional trainer I cannot stress enough, that hitting, screaming and punishment are exclusively human traits and are totally foreign to a dog. They will only teach him to fear you, and cause additional behavioral issues. My response to anyone who hits their dog is: "If hitting a dog works so well, why do you continue to do so?" That is the nicest way I can think of to encourage them to reconsider their actions.

For those of you who are contemplating visiting the beautiful Hamptons and need to find dog friendly accommodations for both of you, here are some suggestions. However, before making reservations anywhere, call with respect to, limitations concerning the weight of your dog, how many dogs you may be traveling with, and if there is a per dog per day charge. Starting with Riverhead – you and your dog may be comfortable at the Ramada. In Hampton Bays – call The Baywatch Motel. In Southampton- try The Atlantic, The Capri, The Bentley, Oak Tree Inn Bed & Breakfast, Southampton Inn, or Southampton Bays Resort. East Hampton visitors can choose from The Dutch Motel, Gansett Green Manor, Holiday Acres, Bend In The Road, Snug Country Cottage, Rose Inn, or Cove Hollow. Going to Montauk? Try Ann Breyers Sound Haven Cottages, Born Free Motel, Burcliffe By-The Sea, Hither House, Shepherds or Snug Harbor Motel.

If you've already made traveling plans that require boarding your dog, the experience will be much easier for both of you, if you are properly prepared. Robin Foster, who grew up on a farm in Sagaponack, has been in the pet care business her whole life, and is in her sixteenth year as hands-on owner of Edge of Pond Kennels, has been kind enough to fill me in on what an owner should know before boarding their dog. Make a reservation, confirm the reservation and call to cancel if necessary. Handle it in the same manner you would handle a hotel reservation. However, if at all possible, check it out first.

Visit the kennel and ask for a tour. If you are not permitted to go beyond the reception area, do not leave your dog there. Make sure you ask the appropriate questions. Will some one be on sight day and night? How do they handle emergencies? Will my dog get any exercise? How cool, clean and dry is the kennel where your dog will be kept? Once you make your decision, the kennel will require proof of up-to-date vaccines including Bordetella for kennel-cough which is airborne, contagious and not exclusively contracted by being kenneled – contrary to the misconception. Make sure that you bring food, toys and bedding if it will make your dog's stay more pleasant, and any medications your dog may need. Prepare a list including habits, feeding schedule, medical alerts, and emergency numbers. If you are out of town, inquire about the local vet used by the kennel. If your dog is flea or tick infested prior to boarding, expect to be responsible for a flea or tick bath at the kennel, and ask about having your dog bathed before coming come. Some kennels may allow or even prefer for your dog to be social during their stay. Find out about play time and let the kennel know if your dog prefers the company of males or females, small or large dogs. Before leaving Edge Of Pond Kennels, I asked Robin what her thoughts were on leaving a dog with a friend vs. kenneling. I now realize that unless you are leaving your dog with a friend who, really loves your dog, will spend a great deal of time with him, and you whole-heartedly believe you can trust, the kennel is a much safer alternative. Robin also indicated that many times a dog from a single dog family will find more stimulation and socialization at a kennel. But, please do your homework first.

Remember this: no being is as capable of loving or more eager to please, than a dog! –Jenna Robbins

Understanding Golf – It's a Skill, Not a Talent

A GREAT GOLF COURSE IS LIKE A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

No, really, it is. She has a personality you have to respect. She doesn't care about your money, your power or your wit. The only quality she responds to is confidence. It's your passkey. With it she'll let you in. Without it her behavior and mood turns predatory. She'll have no hesitation, she'll insult you. And please, don't try to fool her, because you can't. You see, the moment you step on her she's going to rise up and look you straight in the eyes, deep into those windows to your soul where you can't run or hide. "Are you confident," she asks? No? Then you're dismissed! And she'll keep dismissing you until you're mature, that is, until you're truly confident in your skills.

SO: HOW SHOULD WE PREPARE?

If confidence is the passkey then organization is the gateway to higher goals. With that in mind, we begin first lessons at Poxabogue with a PRE-GOLF BRIEFING. It provides our students with a clear map of what they need to know, and it frames the most productive questions for future inquiry. E.O. Wilson, the Harvard entomologist and two-time Pulitzer prizewinner (On Human Nature, The Ants) articulated the importance of asking the right question: "It is more important than producing the right answer," he said. "The right answer to a trivial question is also trivial, but the right question, even when insoluble in exact form, is a guide to major discovery."

Much of the knowledge required to make our discoveries can be summarized in two issues and four questions.

The first issue is RESPECT. You have to respect any game that can increase your vocabulary, and you have to earn the respect of a player. (By "player" I mean those who understand the game: its rules, its etiquette, its nature, and its challenge. I do not mean by players the many single digit handicap golfers who also play the game. This is not to devalue their accomplishments only to suggest that there are better-qualified sources to consult for factual information about what to learn, how to learn it, and why? When a player tells you, "I enjoyed playing with you" he, or she, validates your work.

The second issue is CONFIDENCE. Of course we have to be confident, but confident in what? In our golf swing? That answer is too broad. First we have to be confident in our knowledge: can we articulate the blueprint for how the golf swing evolves? Have we committed that blueprint to our long-term memory? If we have, then we can build and develop a golf swing. If we haven't then we'll always need lessons. Second we have to be confident in our understanding: Do we understand what that knowledge has directed us to feel? Once we better understand the machine, we'll have a better chance at a game.

PRECISION, WHAT MAKES IT SUCH A CRITICAL ISSUE IN GOLF?

Conceptually, at least for the record, everyone agrees that golf, as a discipline, is precise. But even veteran golf instructors have trouble answering "why?" The importance of precision, in my view, is due to golf's emphasis on perfection. Presumably each swing we take is an "attempt" at perfection. Gaining or losing a stroke here or there might not seem so important in our daily games. But as the players in golf have chased greater and greater accuracy, instruction has come to depend more and more on the increasingly precise qualities of thought that my Inward Bound Golf System makes possible. To put it simply, the precision of the shots your body gives you whether you're driving the ball 300 yards or putting from two feet depends directly on the precision of the thought pattern the body uses. If you

Make The Right Play: Give the Gift of Activeware

Yoga, spinning, boxing...fitness is in. And according to a recent survey, Americans feel very strongly about their overall fitness and feel better about themselves when they stay active. So this holiday season, many gift-givers are "gearing up" family and friends for a year full of healthy habits.

The key to shopping for fitness enthusiasts is buying clothes they can wear while enjoying their favorite exercises. The 1999 Russell Athletic "For The Long Run" survey indicates that seventy-one percent of active women and forty percent of men are walking as a regular form of exercise. Other popular workouts include aerobics, cycling and weight training. For these exercises, look for clothes that are durable, comfortable and fit your budget.

Fun and affordable gift ideas include Russell Athletic's newly introduced Naturally Weathered™ T-shirts with an authentically aged appearance and comfortable feel. Other hot items for sweating in the gym or on the field are mesh or jersey shorts in a wide array of colors, baseball jerseys and cotton lycra shorts lined with CoolMax™ to pull moisture away from the skin. Since the survey reveals that nearly three out of four Americans exercise outdoors, consider fleece jackets and vests, half-zip sideline jackets and hooded sweatshirts as practical and creative gifts.

Proper athletic attire is believed to make workouts more enjoyable and more effective. Get your loved ones something they really need this season and encourage them to remain active and healthy. While you're at it, why not pick up some exercise apparel for yourself and join your friends for a workout?

The 1999 Russell Athletic "For The Long Run" national survey polled 1,000 physically active Americans to assess how often they exercise, what they do to exercise, their opinions of activewear and their general philosophy on fitness and self care.

For more information about Russell Corporation, an international consumer products company specializing in activewear, casualwear and athletic uniforms, you can visit the website at www.russellathletic.com.

When working out, the right activewear can help make the activity more enjoyable.

are going to make credible attempts at perfection, then your knowledge should at least be equal to your task – it should be precise.

WHERE SHOULD THE SEARCH FOR PRECISE INFORMATION BEGIN?

If you're going to educate someone about golf, the first question you have to ask is "What is golf?" A simple question, but I searched for decades and never found a definition for golf that satisfied the first component of my guidelines: precision. I define golf as "a test of our senses that challenges our self-control...mentally, physically, and emotionally." Mentally, can we select the right club based on our calculations of distance and the effects environmental conditions (winds, terrain textures, etc.) will have on our ball? Physically, can we execute our plan? And emotionally, can we maintain our composure when our efforts fail? If we can, then we will play "in" the game of golf. If we can't, we will play "at" it. (Playing "at" occurs when one does not care which way things develop and end. But to "play in" a game is to try to determine its course and outcome).

It's one thing to define the game – to postulate its challenge – and something entirely different to build a swing that can actually meet it according to that definition.

CAN YOU DESCRIBE THE GOLF SWING IN TEN WORDS OR LESS?

If there has been one idea of how to swing a golf club thereís been a hundred. But to me, the golf swing could be described in the following manner: "The body swings the arms, and the hands hold on." It identifies our physical components, body, arms, and hands, and defines their job: the body is the engine that swings the arms, and the hands hold on. It implies that centrifugal force supplies our power, not brute force. As a foundation for training it not only serves as our point of departure, it points to our destination. As our point of departure, it tells us that practice is the time we spend educating our body, arms, and hands, not the time we spend hitting balls. As our destination, it guides us, with each lesson, to a physical understanding of its ten words. After all; wouldn't we be better prepared if, at the start of any new venture, we knew exactly what we were going to do and precisely how we were going to do it?

The Style Bar: Full Service Spa and Salon

The best way to keep your self in tune this summer is to visit the new Style Bar in Sag Harbor. After a long stressful day, there is nothing like a body massage, a pedicure, manicure, facial, or any beauty treatment you could ever imagine.

The owners, Perri and Ira Gurfien, have created an upscale, down home, intimate day spa where you will receive every treatment imaginable.

Nicely situated on Bay Street, you enter a world of health and beauty. The staff at the Style Bar is trained in all aspects of body management and are friendly and courteous and ready to serve your every need.

Imagine sitting in a chair that forms to the curves of your body, softly vibrating to the area you chose, a warm heat penetrating your aching muscles, and a trained professional catering to your feet. Yes, there is a such chair and its called a "Solace Whirlpool Foot Spa," a European relaxor massage system. The Style Bar in Sag Harbor has such a machine; there are two in fact, "state of the art" machines.

A spa pedicure consists of first gently cleansing and buffing the foot with salts exfoliating all the dead skin followed by a vigorous massage, that stimulates all the pressure points of the foot, topped off by a heated foot mask, then the pedicure begins.

Waxing is today's way of gently removing unwanted hair; the Depileve waxing system offers a full range of products. These professionally thermostat controlled heating units warm up the wax and then is applied to the unwanted hair area. A strip of silken fabric is then applied and the unwanted hair sticks to the fabric and is completely removed. This unwanted hair is removed by the follicle and takes weeks to grow back as opposed to tweezing, where the hair grows back rapidly.

Another treatment that is offered by the Depileve Company is a deep moisturizing skin treatment called a Paraffin Dip. This luxurious treatment consists of applying a warm wax to either your hands, feet or face, this is the most moisturizing treatment offered as it deeply lubricates the skin, softens the cuticles, and stimulates blood circulation, adding a healthy soft appearance to your skin.

There are many treatments to fit your beauty schedule and your budget. Starting from nail care treatments, paraffin dips, foot relief, waxing, body treatments and massage, deep tissue sports massage, pregnancy massage, aromatherapy, reflexology, Reiki, shiatsu, complete skin and hair care packages, spa-sauna, and specialized face and body treatments for everyone.

All these procedures and so much more are offered by fully licensed skillfully trained professionals at the Style bar in Sag Harbor at One Bay Street. Call, 631 725-6730 for information and an appointment.

POLICE BLOTTER

Somebody was rounding the bases at the Camp Hero baseball field. They were not wearing cleats, but rather radials. The manager of a local team noticed the tire marks on both the infield and outfield on May 8 and called police.

The Flanders Little League field on Wood Road Trail was also vandalized. The culprits heisted home plate and damaged some other equipment, but they left behind a bag of marijuana and a crack pipe.

A Sag Harbor resident complained that he was verbally accosted for no apparent reason at the Sag Harbor 7-Eleven according to Sag Harbor Village Police. When the complainant drove away, the other man followed. As he motored down Route 114, the parking lot lambaster passed in a black, four-door Ford Escort and threw a bottle through the complainant's windshield according to police. Police have been unable to locate the Escort driving, bottle tosser.

A Springs woman complained that a man climbed onto the hood of her car as it was parked in her driveway on Springs-Fireplace Road, and punched a hole in the windshield. No charges have been pressed, but police have a lead.

Last week we reported that a house in Springs was struck by lightning, causing considerable damage to the house. After all the smoke had cleared, the resident noticed some more damage, his wallet was gone. According to police, the wallet was reported to contain $150 in cash.

An East Hampton Town Police officer was travelling east on Main Street in Montauk around 2:30 a.m. when he noticed a 1989 Acura approaching from the other direction weaving in and out of the westbound lane. The officer's radar indicated 55 mph. The limit is 30, so the officer turned around and stopped the errant Acura. As the car pulled over to the shoulder, the officer stopped behind. Then the driver of the Acura, Bertalan Vincze, 26, of Brooklyn, dropped the car into reverse and backed into the police car. Neither Vincze or the officer were injured. Vincze the proceeded to allegedly fail several sobriety tests. He was arrested and released on $500 bail.

East Hampton Village Police arrested Andrew Palmer, 35, of East Hampton and charged him with burglary in the first degree, criminal contempt in the first degree, grand larceny in the fourth degree and unlawful imprisonment in the second degree. Palmer earned these distinctions after he allegedly entered a North Main Street residence, violating a court order of protection. He then allegedly threatened the occupant with two kitchen knives and tied her to a chair with packing tape. He topped it all of by allegedly taking her wallet.

When the resident finally freed herself, she called the police who found Palmer asleep in one of her bedrooms. He was arraigned the following morning and held on $220,000 bail.

A Hampton Bays woman told police that her former boyfriend grabbed her and forcibly removed her pants and rubbed animal feces in her face. He also gave her a hickey on her neck. The woman has pressed charges and a warrant for the man will be issued.

* * *

A cleaning person at a health club in Southampton told police that as she cleaned the men's room she saw a man watching her. The man was watching her clean a stall through the mirror and was masturbating. When the man realized that she knew he was watching her, he said "You don't worry " The man repeated the line several times. Police are investigating.

According to Sag Harbor Village, Police John Siedlarz, 34, of Sag Harbor was stopped at a routine traffic check on Jermain Avenue. The officer noticed that Siedlarz's inspection sticker looked a bit strange, and a closer look revealed that it had been forged. A computer check revealed that the truck Mr. Siedlarz was driving was not registered or inspected and had switched license plates. Siedlarz was arrested for forging the sticker and later released on $250 bail.

Dan's LETTERS

THE SEINFELD TUNNEL
Dear Dan,

Here's an idea for one of your fantasy" pieces about another approach (literally) to solving Hamptons traffic problems.

Boston has its "big dig" – a series of tunnels and below grade roads now under construction and designed to unchoke the city's massive traffic jams. Motivated by the progress of that project, a consortium of Hamptonites of means is planning the construction of a Hamptons tunnel, tentatively being referred to as the Seinfeld Tunnel.

The tunnel would begin at the point where the Long Island Ralilroad crosses Route 27, at a point about a quarter of a mile above the Chrysler Jeep Porsche showrooms. Here, traffic coming from the LIE and cars coming off the soon to be announced East End Auto Train, (for those who shun the expressway) would merge and enter the Seinfeld Tunnel. The toll is expected to be twenty-five dollars each way.

This is obviously a "bigger dig" than the Boston hole. The tunnel would end at the Deep Hollow Ranch, several miles east of the of the Seinfeld spread. On its way there, it follows a path north of the highway, parallel to the tracks, with exits at Bridgehampton, Wainscott, East Hampton and Amagansett. Since the four lane tunnel, which is estimated to cost approximately twelve billion dollars, would be financed entirely by private money, there would of course be a VIP Gold lane (no HOV, however).

Outdoor Film Festival To Visit Bridgehampton

Cinemax has announced the launch of Summerscreen, an outdoor film festival that will visit ten cities on a national tour this summer. A completely FREE event, Cinemax Summerscreen will kick off at Nova's Ark Project in Bridgehampton, Long Island on Saturday, June 3.

Beginning at sundown, Cinemax Summerscreen will feature Raiders of the Lost Ark, Steven Spielberg's classic action/adventure starring Harrison Ford. The Cinemax Summerscreen grounds will open at 6:30 p.m. with live entertainment, interactive kiosks, free giveaways and enter-to-win contests prior to showtime, giving the event a festive atmosphere that the whole family can enjoy.

In addition, consumers can vote for their favorite films of all time in the Cinemax Movie vote, hosted by AOL/ Moviefone and Digital City, by visiting the Cinemax pavilion on site or by logging on to Cinemax.com. Voters will be automatically entered in a sweepstakes to win prizes from such sponsors as JBL, Flower.com, StockBack, Shop4cash, and Flooz.com.

Dolby Laboratones and JBL, sponsors of Cinemax Summerscreen, are providing state-of-the-art sound equipment to make this a memorable movie-going experience. With speaker towers lining the perimeter of the field, as well as speakers behind the screen and digital sound processing, Cinemax Summerscreen audiences will hear theatre-quality surround sound in an outdoor setting.

Cinemax Summerscreen will play at Nova's Ark Project on Millstone Road in Bridgehampton on Saturday, June 3rd. The Ark Project is a Hamptons landmark – acres of fields and meadows, and displays of Nova's original monumental sculptures. Admission is free, but everyone attending MUST have a ticket that can be obtained FREE at Long Island Sound (East Hampton and Amagansett locations), Amagansett Beach and Bicycle Company (Amagansett). Double Rainbow Treats (Water Mill). Wiliow (Montauk). and BookHampton (Sag Harbor. Southampton. Easthampton) or by listening to Beach 104.7 WALK-FM or 96.7 WEHM. The grounds will open at 6:30 p.m., with the movie beginning at sundown. In case of rain, the event will be moved to Saturday, June 10th. For more information, visit Cinemax.com.

Cinemax is a 24-hour premium service that delivers the best variety, the biggest movie hits and the largest collection of films in pay TV, making it the destination of choice for viewers of every movie taste. Cinemax combines select and broad-appeal films, from current box-office hits and top-end action and suspense films to modem classics and cutting edge independent films. CARNEGIE HILL LANDMARK MANSION

This historically important 25-foot wide house, with six stories and basement, is only steps from Central Park. The unusual features of this 12,000sq ft. property are a private garage, elevator, 30-ft formal brick garden with high walls, rooftop terrace, and extraordinary light offered by the four exposures on many floors, The rooms are of magnificent proportions with high ceilings, intricate carved woodwork, and many fireplaces. The distinguished architect Cass Gilbert expanded the facade in 1925 when this was his private residence, to incorporate westerly windows to capture the very desirable views of Central Park. This is a grand and beautiful property, one of the best available in New York. It is being offered for sale. Price Upon Request
